Women's Civic League Appreciative of Aid Given

With the exception of a few minor details the Women's Rest Rooms in the Chamber of Commerce building is completed, adding to the long list of things worth while accomplished by the Women's Civic League. In this worthy undertaking, the Civic League received the moral and financial support from the Ministerial Association and the Chamber of Commerce.

The association turned over all thanksgiving collections to the Civic League for the good of the cause. The Chamber of Commerce gave them the rooms rent free, besides agreeing to pay light, heat and water bills. To raise funds for furnishing the rest room the Civic League gave a caterina dinner, which realized $147. When the fund amounted to a sum sufficient, Mrs. Mary A. Jackson and Mrs. Kip Van Ripper composed a committee to purchase the necessary equipment for making the rooms comfortable and convenient. ### YOLO PROMISES TO BUY TICKETS FOR UNEMPLOYED

LEADERS OF THE ARMY ARE CONSIDERING

Railroads Declare Flatly That They Will Not Issue Free Transportation, Which Caused Yolo County to Abandon Plan to Hire the Jobless Army Back on Oakland and Other Cities Around the Bay.

SACRAMENTO, March 11.—It developed late today that last night robbers raided Harlan Brothers' saloon, securing $1,000 in gold quartz. The police say the unemployed are responsible.

SACRAMENTO, March 11.—Free transportation to various points within a radius of fifty miles has been offered the army of unemployed by the officials of Yolo county. This is upon condition that not more than fifty men be sent to one community.

The members of the army are deliberating over this. The leaders have promised to make known their decision before night.

This followed the refusal early today on the part of all the railroads to issue transportation or carry the men free to other points. The Sacramento and Yolo officials had decided to send the men to Day Point, near Oakland, over the Oakland & Antioch road.

In the meantime the army is shivering with cold, and the members are trying to appease their appetites with a few loaves of bread and black coffee.

Judge Grosscup Talks About the Corporations

PARIS, March 11.—I believe the best remedy for trusts is to limit the private profits of corporations, said Judge Grosscup of Chicago, when he was asked for his opinion on trusts in the United States. The judge is taking a vacation in Europe, where he has enjoyed himself greatly. "Surplus net earnings of these corporations ought to go to the people in the form of taxes. That plan could be enforced automatically. I believe it would tend to cheapen products as well as maintain wages at a just level. What is of great consequence, it would prevent the growth of corporate power to dangerous proportions."

One Dog Received at Express Office Tuesday; Seven Shipped Today

"No master, we are sorry," or some such poem should be recited at the Medford office of the Wells Fargo Express company for when W. F. McManus calls there for the blue brown water spaniel sent him by a Klamath Falls friend, he will find not one, but seven fine brown water spaniels—six of them blind.

And thereby hangs a tale which has a situation like unto the one which worded into story form by Ellis Parke Butler, made the nation laugh over "Pigs is Pigs." Like the book, the scene is an express office, but instead of guinea pigs, pups cause the tangled state of affairs.

Last night Agent J. J. Parker took for shipment to Medford a crate containing the aforesaid f. b. w. s.; this morning he instructed his clerk, Arthur Leavitt, that "that dog" was to go out on the train.

"I guess you mean those dogs," observed Leavitt.

"You heard me the first time—that dog," was the quick rejoinder from the boss.

"Well, which one of them, ten, and what's the answer about the other half dozen?"

Now, Parker has long been wont to sing the praises of his efficient assistant as a sober, steady, industrious, capable and reliable young man. He felt pained and chagrined to think that the young man "might have," so he marched impressively toward the crate to show Leavitt that the condition his talk indicated had caused a woeful optical illusion, and to put in some telling blows for the temperance cause—but he didn't.

A glance into the crate caused the expressman to throw up both hands, for in addition to the dog received last night, there were six crying blind pups, and the brown spaniel was licking them with maternal pride.

All seven were shipped on this morning's train.

New President of Peru Assumes Office

Robert E. Leguia, now president of Peru, has just arrived in the United States on his way home to assume office. He was called from London after President Billinghurst had been driven out. His interpreter has this to say about the new president and the revolution there just before the party started for Washington to visit President Wilson:

"El presidente wants me to say that he did not attain to the presidency by a revolution. Obviously not at all, for President Billinghurst wished to make himself a tyrant, and on February 4th dissolved the congress, so, of course, we had to do something, and he was put out of the country. There is nothing queer about that. It is liable to happen anywhere. If President Wilson should dissolve congress here what do you think you would do? Senator Leguia, being the first vice president at the time, was called back from London to assume the presidency."

At this explanation the senator and his interpreter smiled in evident satisfaction, and when asked why the secretary of war, Henry Varella, happened to lose his life during the dispute, replied airily that there was nothing very remarkable about that, either.

"He was of the government, being in the cabinet," said the interpreter, "and when the fighting began he sided with the government; so he was killed and that was all there was to it."

"How many people were killed along with him?"

"Oh, twenty or thirty; it didn't amount to anything. Why, the same thing could happen in Washington if Wilson retired the congress, as I have said."

According to his story, 400 of the marauders invaded the town, this being made possible by the connivance of treacherous officials. In addition to fighting the men, many of the women were carried away.

Plants Want Too Much

Bandon Mill Asks This City for Large Present

The idea of paying a big bonus to secure new industries for Klamath Falls did not meet with general favor at last night's meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.
