How to Keep House on $4 Week

This Is What Kansas College Teaches

That the Trend Is Toward Better Homes Instead of Dancing, etc., Is Forcibly Shown

MANHATTAN, Kans., April 9.—A scientific war-to-the-death fight against that old bugbear, Mr. High Cost O'Living, is being waged here with little noise but wonderful effect. The Home Economics Department of the Kansas State College is preparing the college girl for wifehood and house wifery. Answering the charge often heard, that college girl graduates know a lot about social procedure and dancing but little regarding household duties, the officials here are teaching college girl grads to keep house on $4 a week. How it is done is told by a member of the faculty.

(Written for the United Press) Every department of household economics seems to have its unique course, usually a much talked of practically one. At K. S. A. C. this is "the dinner work." It was inaugurated in the spring of 1904 because of the desire to make the laboratory self supporting. At that time sixteen members of the faculty were served—today forty four are being served. Then the work resembled class work, the menu being the same throughout and the dishes prepared in the morning laboratory class. Today the work is given for the purpose of giving practical training in marketing; in preparation and in serving meals; and it is in addition to the usual laboratory work of the course.

One of the most interesting rooms to visitors is the dining room with its adjoining small kitchens—the home of the dinner work. These are especially arranged for the work, the large dining room in the center with four kitchens on each side opening from it. Each kitchen is fitted with a sink, work table, gas range and cupboards containing the necessary dishes and utensils for the preparation of the meal and the serving of four guests.

Until last spring members of the teaching force had always been the guests in the dining room, but by the request of the senior students the boys of the graduating class were then given this privilege. The department publishes a pamphlet on table etiquette and table service, which is in demand by those serving and by the guests.

The type of meal served in the dining room varies from day to day, according to this arrangement: Tuesday, formal dinner; Friday, formal luncheon; Wednesday, informal luncheon; Thursday, formal dinner; and Saturday, like Wednesday, informal luncheon. This gives opportunity for practice in several methods of serving, for the making of dishes suitable for these different meals and for the use of all left over materials.

It also makes it possible for the cook to keep the total cost of food materials within her allowance. The menus for these meals are planned by the cook of the week with the assistance each day of the instructor in charge. Many original ideas are worked out especially in observance of special days. Each table in the dining room has its own menu, and its own type of decoration.

Two rotation schemes are employed in this week—one with the guests and one with the students. The guests on Tuesday draw cards at the dining room door which determines their places and their table companions. These four together then pass to the next table on Wednesday, and to the next on Thursday, and so on through the week. This gives them variety in service and in menu, and also makes it a little easier for the girls to use up their left-over materials.

The work of the girls is divided into four parts, that of cook, assistant cook, general helper and waitress.
Each girl does each part of the work for one week, passing from one to the other in definite rotation. The cook of the week bears the greatest responsibility. Each of the other three girls has her certain duties, however, which are quite definite.

Of course the amount of money to be used is an important item. For the food materials to be used in the serving of the five meals to each four guests the cook gets $4. A charge of 25 cents a meal for each guest is made, giving $1 per week to be used for expense of laundry, ice and fuel.
The cook does her own purchasing of fresh vegetables, fruits and meats in the stores of the town.

A store is maintained in the building in order that she may purchase all other materials in the small amounts needed. These, called "department supplies," each cook pays for at the end of each week. These two sets of items are recorded in individual account books.

There is also a third group of supplies called "shelf supplies." These are the staple articles needed at hand when cooking. To estimate the amount and cost of such supplies used during the week, they are weighed out, weights being recorded, at the beginning of each week, and weighed back at the end of the week.

The students are very much interested in this part of their home economics work, and plan for it months before they enroll. In their dressmaking class they make their waitress dress and apron, and in their color and design class they make their menu and place cards. During the period of time that they are enrolled in the course much interest is taken in what the markets afford and in the current price of food materials.

It is the general verdict among the students that the dinner work is one of the most helpful things of the entire course, and it gives promise of being a permanent of the work.
