Klamath Gets Much Attention in Pacific Coast Guide Book

Just such information about Oregon, California and the entire Pacific Coast as the tourist and the 1915 exposition visitor will need most urgently has been found in the book just published by the Pacific coast company under the title of "California and the Pacific Coast for the Tourist."

The Klamath county and Oregon Lakes National Park are given especial mention, the book cover being a large and attractive map. There are in addition other prominent business men who have written "Les Pits," Ray C. Richards, "Adventures of Oregon Southern Oregon in Attaining Tourist Favor"; Professor W. A. Del Monte, "The Other Side of the Question," and various other similar works, but in these cases, the information is confined to the eastern part of the state. Another feature of the publication is a lumber list, backed by the service of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce. The advertisement is free, and there will be an "open to all" to the lumbermen, giving ideas, plans and experience. As a compilation of information, the book is intended to serve as a guide by which native and experienced visitor may measure his time, and the special section on the wildfowl is of especial interest to the tourist. The book which has striking front and back cover is available by good roads for home use.
