

New York People Are Mostly Irish, English

United Press Service

NEW YORK, April 14.—Gotham's claim to being a real cosmopolitan city was proven and the verdict handed down the day by the federal census officials. The evidence was staggeringly conclusive of the charge of cosmopolitanism against New York.

Out of a population of something like 5,500,000 of people who reside in Greater New York, nearly 1,000,000—or, to be exact, 972,968—are of English, Irish, Scotch, Welsh and Celtic descent. These figures include those born in the countries mentioned or born here of parents of those nationalities. Besides these there are among New York's population 1,732,970 persons who were born in foreign lands or who were born here of foreign parents. They are divided as follows:

Yiddish and Hebrew, 861,980; German, 841,889; Italian, 549,444; Polish, 116,101; Magyar, 64,141; Swedish, 61,141; French, 47,220; Norwegians, 35,062; Danish, 14,731; Spanish, 11,626; Greek, 11,623; Roumanian, 10,789; Bohemian and Moravian, 40,988; Russian, 28,870; Lithuanian and Lottish, 11,217; Slovak, 10,504; other Slavs, 10,075; Dutch and Friscan, 9,661; Finnish, 8,211; Armenian, 2,676; and Syrian and Arabic, 3,987.

LAKE STEAMER SOLD YESTERDAY

HOOLIGAN IS NOW OWNED BY A PORTLAND MAN—NEW SKIP, PER PLANS TO REMODEL THE BOAT FOR TOWING

A deal was closed Monday whereby the steamer Hooligan was sold to J. W. Guthrie of Portland by Captain Hansbury. The deal was made through Charles A. Spinning.

The new owner plans to use the boat in towing. He will remodel the craft at once in order to make it more adapted to this class of work.

Latest in Stenography Is a Machine Writing Shorthand

The stenotype was invented by W. Ireland, an expert court reporter, who wrote short-hand at a speed but little below the world's record.

Like all other reporters, he had trouble in transcribing his notes when taken at a high rate of speed, so he conceived the idea of writing dictation down in an easier and more accurate way—"the machine way."

using plain alphabet type, with no positions or shading; a way in which speed would not be attained at the expense of legibility and accuracy.

After nine years' ceaseless effort in this direction, Mr. Ireland has perfected and offered to the reporting world, the stenotype.

The first stenotype weighed 54 pounds. The stenotype in use in the high school weighs a trifle more than eight pounds, about one-sixth the own spacing and re-inking of notes.

It is absolutely quiet, even when the keys are worked at a rate that would write 1,000 words per minute.

There are only twenty-two letters on the keyboard. Some of the letters are omitted to make the operation just that much simpler—to keep all the keys in easy striking distance.

weight of the average typewriter.

It writes on a strip of paper similar to that used on an adding machine. The stenotype has but one-fifth the parts of a typewriter, and its action is entirely automatic, doing its

The missing letters are supplied by combinations.

The United States government issued a basic patent on this board, which means no other machine can use a similar board.

Rev. H. S. Rambo, as Tramp for a Night

Rev. H. S. Rambo, a well known minister of New York city, now knows something of the feeling of loneliness that comes to the man out of a job and home in a big city. He, with Rev. Graham S. Hunter, spent one cold night on the streets of New York without funds. This is his story of his experiences:

"We wore no overcoats, and as our clothes were ragged we suffered from the cold, as the night was bitter. We had not shaved for two days, and no one whom we met suspected that we were not tramps. We applied, half frozen, to the municipal lodging house for food and shelter. We found it already overcrowded with vagrants. We finally got a cup of coffee each and a few slices of bread. I have never tasted anything better in all my life, for I was chilled and mighty hungry. There were more than 200 men stretched out on the hard floor, and every bed was occupied. We finally slept on the floor with the others.

"We were particularly struck by the fact that many of the men we saw in the place had good faces, showed no signs of dissipation, and were just plain unfortunates in the race of life. Of course there was a quota of men who showed that they were victims of drink, but many, far too many, were begging a night's lodging and coffee and bread because they found it impossible to earn a roof and a meal. I can say from personal experience that most of the men we encountered were anxious to get work, but found it impossible. We talked with many men, who told heart-rending stories, often also concerning the plight of women and children whom these fathers had failed to support through no fault of their own."

An Important Chamber of Commerce Meeting

Matters of prime importance to Klamath county will be discussed at tonight's meeting of the members of the Klamath Chamber of Commerce. To this meeting all the residents of the city are invited.

One of the first matters to receive attention will be the choosing of a delegation to attend the get-together meeting at Medford this month, when boosters of Jackson, Josephine and Klamath counties will form an organization for advertising the marvellous scenic attractions of Southern Oregon. A large attendance from here is desired.

There will also be taken up at this time the selection of a suitable design and slogan for the Chamber of Commerce. The designs, etc., submitted by the school children of the county will be considered, and the prize awarded. The winning design is to be used on a button.

Talks on co-operation, etc., will be made by Judge Benson, Rev. Mablefield, W. A. Dalsell, Rev. E. C. Richards and others. A luncheon is also a part of the program, to be furnished by the wives of the directors.

SMALL PER CENT OF PUBLIC LANDS

OVER NINE-TENTHS OF CENTRAL OREGON AREA THROWN OPEN, IS ALREADY OWNED BY PRIVATE PARTIES

PORTLAND, April 14.—Although the federal forestry bureau made bold announcement a few weeks ago that 410,000 acres of land in various parts of Central Oregon were about to be withdrawn from the forest reserves, it develops upon closer analysis that only 30,000 acres of this entire area will be available for actual settlement for other than dry farming purposes.

In response to the numerous inquiries George H. Cecil of Portland, district forester, has issued the following statement:

"The lands involved in this elimination are in the Deschutes and the Paulina national forests, and comprise a little over 410,000 acres in eight contiguous bodies, the largest of which is located along the Deschutes River, in the vicinity of Crescent and La Pine, in Klamath and Crook counties. Most of the lands in this vicinity have either been withdrawn for reclamation purposes, and for this reason will not be subject to settlement and entry with the balance of the area on May 15th and June 15th, or are already held in private ownership. The balance of the area eliminated is mostly in lands surrounding the Fort Rock Valley and Silver Lake. Nearly all this latter area has been classified as dry farming land, and will be subject to settlement and entry under the enlarged homestead law providing for 320-acre entries.

"In the whole elimination of 410,000 acres all excepting about 10,000 acres already are held in private ownership, withdrawn for reclamation purposes or classified as dry farming. A considerable portion of the lands are on public lands of low agricultural value."

More than 5,200 students are enrolled in the correspondence course of the University of Wisconsin. Of those 1,400 are pursuing correspondence work for university credit, and 1,500 are carrying college subjects without being candidates for a degree.
