Two New Members of Congress Elected

Dow H. Drukker
James A. Gallivan

Republicans claim that the election of Drukker as a member of the House of Representatives in the New Jersey congressional district, which includes Paterson and Passaic, two large cities, was a direct slap at the Panama canal tolls fight of President Wilson. John J. O'Byrne, democrat, endorsed by the president, who upheld the stand of the administration on the tolls question, was overwhelmingly defeated. Drukker has not said anything openly on the question of tolls, but it was believed he was against the president. The district is normally republican, but republicans had not in recent years won by such a large plurality as Drukker's.

James A. Gallivan, chosen in place of Mayor Curley of Boston, who resigned from the house, is a democrat who won over a republican and a progressive by a large plurality.

"Uncle Nate" was engaged in farming and livestock raising until this spring, when he disposed of his stock, etc., and retired.

That it is only from agricultural pursuits that he has retired was shown this morning, when petitions were circulated, asking that the name of N. S. Merrill be placed on the ballot for the democratic nomination as county commissioner. He will be opposed in the primary by Edward S. Frazer, a well known Poe Valley rancher.
