

Even the Furniture Grows in This City

Other cities boast of their climates and soils that will grow anything from bananas to snow daisies; let them flaunt to the world the wonderful productivity and the climatic stimulants to growth that they possess—Klamath Falls is still one or two jumps in the lead of even the story of the growth of hair on a cannon ball, upon which hair restorer was poured.

The newest freak growth to be noted here is the growth of table legs at the Moteschenbacher furniture store. A Doubting Thomas can easily verify this by a call at the establishment.

Some time ago Mr. Moteschenbacher purchased considerable willow furniture from a local man, the legs of the tables being made of green willow, gilded and painted. This morning he noted with surprise that several green sprouts had grown out of the furniture, and would soon burst forth into leafy foliage.

As the willows were green when fashioned into furniture, and were at once gilded and painted over, it is believed that the paint and gilt conserved the sap in the limbs, and made possible the growth.

"No, I don't know whether these are just plain willows or saplings from apple trees," said Mr. Moteschenbacher today. "In case the latter is the material used, I have a notion to put the table in a shallow pan of water, and maybe in the fall I'll give you a story about fruit growing right on my own table."
