Tango "fends" will now have to miss a dance to quench their thirst for the beer dispensary, always heretofore at their elbows, will have been moved to parts more distant.

Trio Is Entertaining. One of the drollest and best attractions at the Star theater this winter is the Calliope Trio, which appears this evening for the last time. The members have good voices, which blend harmoniously, and they get rid of some clean, clever comedy.

tant rates to accelerate the dissolution of its victims.

Now, if the voters and good people of Klamath Falls will only pull aside "The Shades of Oblivion" they will see quietly reposing behind the curtains—in one corner the sanctimonious Mr. Murray, with his hands tied, willing to obey the will of his lord and master, "The Klamath Development Company." On the other side, "Rip Van Winkle," our present chief executive, who has just awoke from a two years' slumber to find out that there were some streets to be plowed up in Mills' addition, and that the city charter demands that the streets should be kept in a sanitary condition. This is the candidate of the Water, Light and Power company.

I will even go further and state that those candidates whom I have referred to have even invaded the sacred precincts of our churches to disturb fervent but unobtruding piety. Churches were built to God; not for the benefit of selfish politicians.

Let the people weigh each candidate on the scales of justice and decide on election day whom they want for mayor. Civil dissensions should cease among the people, and everybody act as a unit to make Klamath Falls the center of the coming Inland Empire of the West.

As a snail, I will state that if I am elected mayor of Klamath Falls, under my administration I will endeavor to make it a city of "Golden Rule," with equal rights to all and special privileges to none.

LITTLE STORIES FROM WAR ZONE

Troop C. of the 15th. Cavalry Is the Richest in the Army. Arrival of German Warship Makes Old Timers Smilingly Recall Boxer War

By WILLIAM SHEPHERD (United Press Staff Correspondent)

VERA CRUZ, April 29.—Why Jim Montague—that is not his real name—had a strike of his Mexican miners at Monterey goes like this:

Yellow fever appeared in the city, and, of course, the first effort of the doctors was to guard against its spread. They ordered champagne for those who were rich enough to afford it to increase heart action, and thereby ward off chances of getting the disease. For the Mexican peons were ordered small doses of strychnine, and Montague, before his miners went to work mornings, used to line them up in rows and have the mine doctors give each man a spoonful of a strychnine solution.

Word got out among the Mexicans that Montague was trying to poison his miners. One of the Mexicans by stealth got hold of the bottle of strychnine to see what it was. A hundred Mexicans looked on while a hungry dog ate a piece of meat over which the contents of a full bottle had been poured. A moment later a hundred Mexicans saw a Chihuahua dog turn up its toes and die.

The strike began that night, and it took two weeks for Montague to prove that he was not a wholesale "gringo" poisoner.

When the old German warship Bremen—really nothing more than a scout ship now, owing to her age—steamed into Vera Cruz harbor among the Yankee gunboats the other day, many and many a cheer of recognition went up from some of the old Yankee seadogs.

"What are you cheering her for?" an old Yankee captain was asked. "Reminds me of a funny incident," he answered. "When we were off China during the Boxer trouble, we lay for weeks in the combined navy, without anything to do. Finally the admiral took it into his head that we ought to have some practice. To our surprise, as our five ships steamed away the German warships in the harbor swung around and followed us. Go where we would that day, we couldn't shake them. They hung on in a long, solid stubborn line."

The next day we were ordered out again, and again the Germans, with stubborn persistence, followed us, never going faster or slower than we did. After four days of this we got mad, and the American officers sent over to the German ships a note in which they said they were very sorry that they always chose the same grounds on which the Germans decided to maneuver. It was sarcastic, you see.

Three high German officers brought the answer back to us in person. They came onto the flagship and said: "You're not choosing the same grounds we go. We've been following you."

"But why do you follow us when we go out for secret practice?" they were asked.

"Why, don't you see?" replied the German officers, "we want to see what you are doing. We have no trouble with the United States, but, if we should have a war with you, it would be necessary for us to know about your tactics."

"And with that," continued the old seadog, "they bowed very politely and went off the ship, without any hard feelings on either side."

"The reason I cheered for the Bremen was that she was the ship that used to lead that long line of square-bowed German sleuths out to our practice grounds every day."

Among the cavalrymen down along the Rio Grande, waiting to come up here to the Mexican capital, if they get a chance, is Troop C of the Fifteenth, the richest single troop in the army. It isn't made up of rich men's sons, either, but most of its officers, including Captain Warren Dean, and many of its privates are business men.

Just at present the troop has two acres of muskmelons planted at Clint, Texas; owns 200 chickens, 20 hogs, and has a cow and a calf, all of which are or will be bringing money in for the troop mess. At last reports Dean was negotiating for a moving picture show in the small town of Clint, which would bring even more funds into the troop exchequer.

The biggest and finest ball ever given by a troop along the Rio Grande since the Mexican trouble started, was sponsored by Troop C. It cost $800, and folks attended for miles around.

"Why, don't you see?" replied the German officers, "we want to see what you are doing. We have no trouble with the United States, but, if we
