

Now Majors Are Working, We'll Lamp Them Over Again

Rejuvenated Yanks Are Greatest Sensation in the Initial Struggles--Walter Johnson's Record for 1914 Is Nicely Started

By HAL SHERIDAN
(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, May 1.—As no doubt old man Bocrates remarked as he gently eased himself off from all turmoil and strife, how different are the days of April and October. After the stuttering start due to interruptions by rain, May will see a beginning of the jockeying at the turn and a better opportunity will be afforded toward getting some sort of a line as to who's who in this mad scramble for the American and National league pennants.

The erstwhile leaders started with a wobble. The general dope didn't any more hit on the early games as to what the majority of the guesses as to what the Giant pitchers would do to the Athletics last October. How different are the days of April and October. The real surprise in the American League has been dished up by Frank Chance. His New York Yankees are a revelation, as compared with the team which struggled along last year and went from April until June without winning a game on their home grounds. Not that Chance may be a pennant contender, for again the difference between April and October looms up, but the spirit and general work of the present Yanks makes former teams hiding behind that name look like a collection from the morgue.

Opening the season the rejuvenated Yanks ripped the hide off the Athletics twice in succession. Connie Mack's clan, it is true, was not near up to form, but Chance's men tore into them just as though they had finished copping a pennant and were out to lick the world. There was no faltering, but a steady, boring attack and a stubbornness on defense that checked the Mackmen on the same field where they run wild with the Giants—last October.

The Yanks are due to make trouble for more than one team in the League if they hold the gate they cut out for themselves at the start. In Mabel, at third, and Pockinbaugh, at short, the left side of the Yank infield compares favorably with the best. Williams, at first, sat in on the old assignment of Hal Chase as though it was the only thing he had been waiting to do on this sphere, and intended to make a good job of it. Chance's outfield has been completely worked over, and the P. L. appeared to have re-garbed his pitchers. If they con without busting a main spring or jarring loose some bolts, the Yanks may give a few uneasy hours to aspiring pennant chasers as the season wears along, and knock loudly at the first division. Where they will really finish, however, may be better told in these dispatches along during the season of that proverbially "bright blue weather"; for as has been remarked before, how different are the days of * * *

At the start, at least, the Phillies in the National League showed more strength than was expected in view of the rough way in which the Peds treated Charley Doolin in grabbing men. The Giants started slow, and the Phillies walloped them twice. Then even Matthewson got his when he stacked up against Brooklyn. The Boston Braves, expected to be one of the most improved teams in the parent organization, also faltered with the springing of the barrier. With but few exceptions, pitching arms seem to be in better shape than batting eyes. The swatting lamps were sadly in need of trimming, but as the sun's rays begin to warm up, so are the sluggers steaming along behind their jobs of piling up base hits.

Walter Johnson is one exception so far as pitchers are concerned. The Kansas cyclone appears to be starting out on his greatest year in baseball. In his first two games Johnson allowed just one run. He shut out the Boston Braves with three hits. The Yanks slipped over one run on him, but collected only four safe drives. Johnson met them, too, when they were flushed with confidence after having laced the daylight out of the Athletics. Walter simply stood up and shot over his benders as though no one was on the plate, and save for those four occasions when a Yank took a stab and met one head on, there might as well not have been.

Francis Outmet, American golf champion, struck a mental hazard in England, and sat down to think his way over it before mixing in too many matches. Outmet said he did not feel that he was primed for real play. He therefore engaged in some mental calisthenics.

Possibly that was the trouble with the Giants and Athletics at the start. Frank Baker's first effort on the Polo grounds since he faced the Giant pitchers in October was a weak roller to short. He was an easy out. Time should have been taken out for Baker to contemplate the spot in which he pitched his home run smash off Marquard. It might have been an inspiration.

Colored Army Officer Is Cause of Discord

United Press Service

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 1.—

A serious complication arising out of the race question is anticipated by army officers when the amendments to the so-called army "Manchu" law becomes effective. Major Charles Young of the Ninth cavalry, a colored man, is the complication. According to the "Manchu" amendments, Young, and every other army officer will have to serve four of every six years with troops in the field. In Young's case this will entail his occupying a major's quarters in various barracks. Usually such quarters are contained in one of a row of three houses provided for those of the major's rank.

Thus far the war department has succeeded in giving Young, who is a West Point graduate, various detached details, thus preventing any breach of his close association, in barracks, with brother officers. But these detached details will not be possible under the Manchu law amendments.

Thus far the race question has never been a serious one in the army, owing to the organization of white and colored regiments, yet officers at a post are thrown so constantly in each others company—particularly those of the same rank—that disposition of Young is a vital question.

It is gossip here that previous attempts to "get" Young have failed. He has passed all his examinations with flying colors, is a first class soldier and fighting man, and just simply can't be ousted. As a matter of fact, army officers are rather proud of him—in an official way.

They say he has never attempted nor sought social advantage from his rank, has never attempted to "break into" post affairs and mix with brother officers. But they feel it would be infinitely embarrassing, with his major's rank, to have even a man of Young's type in barracks. An army officer here is authority for the following tribute to Young's discretion:

"Army etiquette requires that all officers at a post make a call on a new comer, an officer, at the earliest moment after his arrival. Major Young, who was stationed at a post where I was, waited as long as possible, and then having ascertained beyond a doubt that the new officer was not at home, called and left his card. It goes to show Young's appreciation of his position."

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

TAKE A GLASS OF SALTS TO FLUSH OUT YOUR KIDNEYS AND NEUTRALIZE IRRITATING ACIDS.

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast; continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normally again.

Jad salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which quickly relieves bladder trouble.
