

Coming Year to See Great Auto Outputs

United Press Service
 DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 3.—If the automobile industry may be taken as a criterion of prosperity, 1915 will be a banner year. With reports of record crops from all sections of the Central West, the great automobile plants of Michigan are putting the finishing touches on plans for the greatest output in the history of their remarkable growth.

In a number of instances the plans of Michigan companies call for an output that will exceed the sales of the current year by not less than 50 per cent. Not the slightest doubt exists among local dealers, who constantly retain a hand on the pulse of the automobile world, that the production and disposition of 1915 cars will far exceed all previous records.

Taking the lead with the sale of exactly 202,194 cars in a period of nine months ending July 1, 1914, the Ford company has set the pace which the other companies declare they will have no difficulty in keeping up.

This phenomenal output by a single concern, while it seems staggering as an item by itself, is only a ripple on the pool, according to automobile manufacturers.

Every Michigan company of note has completely disposed of its 1914 output, and preparations are under way to supply the increasing demand by enlarging the capacity of their plants.

That the swift evolution of the automobile has not reached its crest, manufacturers say, is made plain by the tremendous sales of the season now closing, and the new efforts on the part of manufacturers to outstrip the season just opening.

While there is to be nothing pronounced in changes, say the makers, as to appearance of the cars, the motors, it is declared, will be decidedly improved.

And Yet We Sometimes Say the Heat Here Is Too Much

United Press Writer Makes a Graphic Picture of the Suffering of Gotham's Poor in Congested Districts

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—A street full of frowly, bedraggled men and women, of countless babies with limbs and bodies uncovered shameless to the faint slants of moonlight that penetrate down through a fetid stinking atmosphere, of mothers cramped on curbstones, on boxes, or in doorways like dejected Magdalens, of red-faced or white-faced men, their heads bowed, thrown back as with sleepless eyes they plead for the breeze that seldom comes—

The East Side on a hot summer's night. You may have seen it? If you have, you probably went home with contentment in your heart for your own lot, no matter how mean a lot it was.

Every citizen of the United States ought to see this great East Side. He'll appreciate the more why the Mafia exists, why there are bomb throwers, and why with misery comes crime.

A hot night means lives lost on the East Side. It is incomprehensible why East Side babies live anyway. They can't sleep indoors these hot nights. Their mothers take them out to the sidewalks. They are bedded in the mother's arms, on two chairs, in a box—anywhere. The street is alive with them. A mother, clad above the waist in a single garment, that leaves her arms bare from the shoulder, calmly nurses her youngster in the flickering gas light.

The men, most of them worn by annual labor or long hours in dinny stores, lie prostrate on the sidewalks, in the doorways, or else pillow their heads and bodies on bedding on the fire escapes. A few of the men will sit on the curbstone near the corner family saloon and quaff huge goblets of beer. All is very quiet, considering that there are hundreds on the street.

It is midnight, but the groups on the streets are unchanged. An occasional wagon rattles along, the driver cautiously wending his way. The tired women grouped over their babies, muttering terms of endearment in a babel of foreign languages, do not look up. The little grocery store closes up—that is, its lights go out, but the proprietor, his breast bared, lies in the doorway seeking sleep.

Some wakeful children roll a milk can along the street. Its clanging echoes rouse a hundred sleepers and there is a momentary outburst of foreign oaths and a whimpering of children over their punishment.

Then quiet again. Everywhere is the stinking breath of the steamy streets, littered with paper and rubbish of every description.

The night goes wearily on. The sleepers occasionally awaken, talk wearily, stretch their cramped limbs, and seek repose again. In one doorway five children lay all but naked, and curled together in a mass of legs and arms—the street light shedding a radiance into their eyes. But they sleep just the same.

A sightseeing automobile rounds the corner, the gears grinding. Men and women of another world chatter and point out the "sights"—the dejected women, twisted in attitudes of exhaustion, and the babies and the slatternly men. For the most part, they laugh and joke about the babies' nakedness and the women complain about the smells.

The East Side tolerates them. There is no place else to go but the streets and "rubberneck wagons" are part of the night.

Finally dawn penetrates the dingy streets, sheds a ghastly light over the drawn faces of the sleepers. They awaken. Another day has come. And another night will come later.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

IF YOUR BACK IS ACHEING OR BLADDER BOTHERS, DRINK LOTS OF WATER AND EAT LESS MEAT.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes the waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days, and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to cleanse and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which every one should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and advertisement.
