United Press Service BRUSSELS, Aug. 10.—The Germans now hold the city of Liege. At least some of the forts are still held by the Belgians, but they will be compelled to act independent of each other. It is expected that the Germans will have a besieging force and go south.

The Belgian war office made the following statement: "All of the Liege forts are intact. They can hold out indefinitely. All are well supplied.

The allied Belgian and French armies are moving forward, driving the Germans back. The Germans still hold Liege, but will be unable to advance south as the forts there control the roads and the armies are in a position to cut them off even if the forts should be carried by storm."

Late advices say the Franco-Belgian cavalry and field artillery, supported by mounted infantry, are attacking the Germans north of the Meuse. It is reported that they have penetrated the German lines of communication at several points, blown out bridges and in other ways interfered with transportation until the Germans are in danger of being isolated from their supplies.

Kaiser Wilhelm and His Six Sons Parading Through Berlin Streets

Just before the European crisis came, Kaiser Wilhelm and his six sons paraded at the head of a military procession through the streets of Berlin and excited wild enthusiasm. Not only the Kaiser himself but the Berlin people are proud of the six sons. Each in his uniform, with the

Just before the ultimatum was sent by the German government to the czar the Kaiser called these six sons into a conference and went over at length the prospects of war. It was believed he laid bare to them his whole plan and his hopes.

ANOTHER TRIAL AT A DELIVERY

TWO PRISONERS, BUSILY PLYING HACK SAW, ARE WATCHED BY DEPUTY SHERIFF AND FIRE CHIEF

Another attempt at jail breaking was made at the county jail Saturday night, when Isadore Mauseshell, held for horse stealing, and A. L. Pumphord, held for forgery, were watched by Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Low and Fire Chief Wakefield, trying to saw through the case hardened steel bars of the "tank" with a hacksaw. Low heard the noise while walking around the jail, and with Wakefield, he watched through a window. It is believed that all the prisoners were concerned in this attempt. After Pumphord and Mauseshell had worked with no success, they hid the saws and retired. Had they cut the bars of the tank, they would have had to cut out the bars on a jail window before they could get out. After Mauseshell was locked in the "dungeon" a little while, he willingly produced the hacksaws and frame.

The majority of the Hindus employed at the Hammond mills have gone and the balance are preparing to depart in the immediate future. It is alleged that the men are returning to India by way of San Francisco, where, it is said, a vessel has been chartered to aid in a revolution which is expected to break out in India as a result of England being occupied in the general European war. It is said a Japanese steamship will carry the Hindus to their native land.

ADY HOME FROM WORKING TO GET EXTENSION BILL

LOOKS FOR SIGNATURE ON IT SOON

Klamath Farmers Will Be Greatly Relieved as Soon as the Bill is Passed, as Their Amendment in December Will Be 42 Cents an Acre, Instead of 50 per Acre as Under the Present Reclamation Law

Back from Washington, where he was sent by the Klamath water users to work for the passage of the reclamation extension bill, comes Abel Ady, president of the local association. Since he has been in Washington, and largely through his efforts, the bill, which previously had passed the senate, is now through the house. "The bill as passed by the house was amended to require payment of a 5 per cent instead of a 2 per cent installment by the entryman," said Ady. "This does not affect the Klamath project.

"An amendment added provided that estimates and apportionments for the work must be submitted and approved by congress before work starts. This does not mean that the reclamation service goes before congress asking for appropriations like the rivers and harbors or similar improvement funds, but simply requires congress to approve of the estimates and apportionments, making obligations if deemed advisable. If this should be found to be hampering, a new congress could repeal this clause.

The senate will concur in the bill as amended by the house," Ady continued. "This would require no further action by the house, leaving the bill ready for the president's signature in a few days.

"After the signing of the bill, public notice will be issued by the secretary of state, and boards of appraisers will be appointed for the re-adjusting of the charges on all of the different projects. After this is finished, the water users will be required to express their approval by vote, and in case of approval by a majority on a project, new contracts will be entered into in accordance with the terms of the bill.

"Under the new contracts, the first installment of the construction charge will become due and payable December 1, 1914. This will be 2 per cent of the total balance due on construction charge.

To Enlarge the Hatchery

State Game Officials Pay Klamath Brief Visit

"This is the best proposition in the state for trout fry production. We are negotiating for another lease from the Western Pacific Land & Timber company, and will go ahead and enlarge the capacity of the hatchery."

Thus spoke R. E. Clanton, state superintendent of fish hatcheries, after inspecting the trout hatchery at Spencer Creek. Accompanied by State Game Warden C. E. Evans and Fish and Game Commissioner Duncan, Clanton motored in Saturday night. The party left this morning from Medford, via the dam being constructed by the California-Oregon Power company, where they will look over the proposed fishway.

Next year there will be from a half to three-quarters of a million young trout hatched at Spencer Creek for the Klamath streams. The rest of the eggs will be hatched for other parts of the state. Work is to be started right away on building new racks, etc., for taking trout spawn in the spring.

According to Hatchery Superintendent Carey J. Ramsby, an egg taking station is to be established on the north fork of the Sprague river, where the eggs will be hatched for distribution in that section.

It is also proposed that an egg taking station be established at some point where the eggs can be taken from the rest of the local rainbow, except that it spawns in the fall instead of the spring. The eggs taken this fall will be shipped to the state hatchery at Bonneville to be hatched.

Mr. Clanton expressed regret at not being able to remain longer. He states that there is a board meeting in Salem Thursday, which all must attend, but he promises to be here in October, when he will meet with the local sportsmen.

Alleges Dental Trust

"Painless Parker" to Hold Two Meetings in City

Is there a "dental trust" in Oregon?

Dr. E. R. Parker, better known as "Painless Parker," claims there is. He is so firmly convinced of this that he has an initiative measure framed abolishing the state dental board, which, he alleges, is composed wholly of members of the "ethical" cult, who will refuse licenses to dentists who "desecrate" the profession by advertising—and paying for the ads.

Parker's measure would abolish the board, and would allow the granting of a license by the secretary of state to any dentist who is a graduate of a recognized school, or the holder of a certificate in some other state.

Tonight Parker will explain his bill in a lecture in the courthouse park. He will also at the same time tell of the methods of the "ethical dental trust," and in addition to giving ing a lecture on the care and preservation of the teeth, will also extract teeth free of charge without pain by the Parker method. He will be here two days in the interests of his measure, to combat which the "dental trust," as Parker calls the state organization, is raising a fund of $45,000.

Parker is one of the best known dentists in the United States. Although he holds certificates in New York, Canada, Pennsylvania, California, and other places, he was refused a license in Oregon. He holds that this is because he advertises, so he has set in to break the "trust."

The passage of the bill, he says, will mean at least 2,000 more dentists for Oregon, and cheaper prices. The "trust," Parker contends, will grant licenses only enough to allow for increase in population and to replace dentists who have died or left the state. This, he contends, keeps the price of work at too high a price.
