Latest Photograph of Frederick William

This is the latest photograph of Frederick William, the German crown prince, who is now in command of the German troops at Liege.

While the kaiser was seemingly making efforts to act as mediator between Austria-Hungary and Russia, at least giving outward evidence of it, the crown prince was shouting for war. The populace in Berlin, which was thrilled by the war ardor, made a hero of him and cheered him whenever he was seen on the streets. When the kaiser and kaiserin, along with the crown prince and crown princess, returned last Sunday night from Potsdam to the palace in Berlin. Under den Linden was blocked by cheering thousands. The crown prince came in for as much of the applause as the kaiser.

LIASSO PELICANS ON LOWER LAKE

NOVEL STUNT RESORTED TO BY FURBER TO CATCH THE YOUNG BIRDS FOR ZOO OF A SEATTLE PARK

While roping pelicans may not be the event at the next Rodeo, nevertheless, this stunt has been pulled off here, and has proven practical. It was resorted to after attempts to run down the birds with boats had failed. Several days ago, Warden J. J. Furber of the Lower Klamath Lake reserve received a request from County Game Warden H. Rief of Seattle for half a dozen young pelicans. These were to be placed in Woodside Park.

In order to catch the birds, Furber hit upon the lariat plan. While he operated the lower lake patrol boat, Edgar Furber stood on the craft's deck and threw the noose over the birds, which can swim, but are not yet able to fly. It took repeated casts to catch some of the birds, as they would dive out of the noose before it could be tightened.

The birds and a plentiful supply of fish were shipped out by express. They are due in Seattle today, and it is believed that they will make the trip without suffering in any way.
