

Germans Break First Line of Allies' Defense in 3-Day Fight

BELIEVED GREATEST FIGHT IN HISTORY OF THE WORLD

PARIS, Aug. 24.—The battle between the Germans and allies in Belgium has been raging for three days. The war office says the casualties greatly outnumber the losses in any modern battle. The fighting is desperate, and the loss is appalling, and it is hardly possible that the results will be known for several days more.

At some points the wall of the allies' defense has been broken, while elsewhere the Germans have been driven back in confusion. The line of battle resembles a "Z", extending from Audenarde to Brussels, to Mons and thence to Namur. The length of the line is continually increasing.

If the German troops are routed, therefore, they are in danger of being their force cut in two.

Late tonight the war office refuses to discuss the situation at the front. There is no verification of the report that the Germans have broken through the allies' center.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The press bureau tonight announced that the first breach of the allies' defense was broken by the Germans, necessitating a withdrawal of a portion of the forces to the original position on the French frontier.

This withdrawal was said to be in accordance to the original plans for strategic reasons.

According to official announcement, the British expeditionary forces engaged the enemy early yesterday in the vicinity of Mons, and their line is still holding.

Experts agree that if the Germans are defeated in this battle they will be compelled to fight on the defensive thereafter.

The war office is silent tonight regarding the Belgian situation, which is considered critical. The public is warned that it must not expect too much.

Experts say that if the allies retire to secondary positions it will be merely a strategic movement.

England is rushing preparations to send more troops to the continent.

UNITED PRESS SERVICE
CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 24.—Beware of the public pen! As a spreader of disease it is in the same class with the roller towel and public drinking cup, and if health officers of Cleveland have their way, it will sink into oblivion along with its evil companions.

LIGHT HOG AND SHEEP OFFERING

LAST WEEK'S BEEF LIQUIDATION WAS FAIRLY GOOD—DEMAND FOR PORK WAS MUCH IN EXCESS OF SUPPLY

(Herald Special Service)
PORTLAND, Aug. 24.—Cattle liquidation was of fair volume last week. The market was about steady, top steers selling around 7 cents; cows, $6; heifers, $6.25; top on bulls, $4.50.

There was an extremely light receipt of hogs for the week. Business was active and the outlet broad.

Demand exceeded the supply, and the market held the highest position of any American market.

A comparatively small supply of mutton offering. A thousand fancy yearling wethers selling at $5 was the outstanding feature.

The ewe trade was sluggish, and the quality of lambs offering was only medium. They brought $5.

STATE DEPT. SAYS JAPAN WILL KEEP FIGHT IN ORIENT

Good for Porcelain
Assayer Liljegrans states that there are certain stretches of soil in this section that consists of kaolin and feldspar, and that it would be highly profitable to build a porcelain plant in the valley. There is an abundance of kaolin, according to Mr. Liljegrans, and much feldspar, which serves as a flux, which imparts to porcelain its strength and translucency.—Medford Sun.

200 Pheasants Coming

Actual Distribution of Birds Here Is Under Way

Now that two years of experimental work has proven that the Chinese pheasant thrives in Klamath county, the state game department, through the Klamath Sportsmen's Association has taken up in earnest the work of introducing this great game bird in this vicinity. Toward that end, 200 pheasants are being shipped here to be liberated.

Secretary W. O. Smith of the Klamath Sportsmen's Association is in receipt of information from the Simpson pheasant farm at Corvallis, to the effect that eight crates of "Chinamen" will be shipped from there today, and eight more crates tomorrow. These should arrive Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The sportsmen have already arranged for the distribution of the birds through the county. A number of ranches have been selected, and about twenty-five of the birds will be sent to each ranch to be liberated.

The ranches chosen are: William Tingley, Midland; Alex Davis, Midland; Charles Pickett, Sand Hollow; D. Ellis Young on Lost River; Rex Bord, Olen; Shook Ranch, Dairry; Jack Donnelly, Langell Valley; Charles A. Bunting, Merrill.

In addition, the ranchers will feed the birds, if necessary, this winter. The state fish and game commission provides for this by making an appropriation to purchase wheat for winter feeding. In addition, the ranchers and sportsmen will watch the birds as much as possible, in order to prevent any "pot-hunters" from frustrating the introduction plans by killing the birds before they have a chance to become accustomed to this section.
