ARRESTED FOR USE OF WATER

FIRST ALLEGED VIOLATION OF THE NEW SPRINKLING ORDINANCE IS CHARGED TO MRS. DAVENPORT

The first alleged infraction of the city's new sprinkling ordinance came to light this morning, when Chief of Police Smith served a warrant on Mrs. W. C. Davenport. She agreed to appear before Police Judge Leavitt tomorrow morning.

The complaint is made out by the California-Oregon Power company. It alleges that Mrs. Davenport has paid no attention whatever to the sprinkling hours arranged.

ELI FOOTBALL SQUAD IS OUT

SEVERAL OLD TIMERS AND AN ARMY OF HOPEFULS TURN OUT IN ANSWER TO THE CALL OF THE COACH

United Press Service
MADISON, Conn., Sept. 3.—Yale cracked open the 1914 football preliminaries this afternoon, when Head Coach Frank Hinkley put a squad of candidates through a limbering up practice. Several veterans answered today's call. These were also a number of promising heavyweights from last year's Freshman eleven, as well as several second string men on last year's varsity team.

Hinkley's plan is to keep the men at the limbering up practice for two weeks, so that when real practice begins, about September 17, the men will be ready to start right in at the scrimmage work. Hinkley, it was stated today, will drill 'this year's eleven in straight, simple football, and pay little attention to complicated formations.

that they had stood there through two light showers, hinted at blood.

The many conflicting stories that Frank Williams has told concerning the whereabouts of McLeod were the immediate cause of his being arrested and held on suspicion until the mystery could be cleared up. The friends of "Scotty" became anxious concerning his whereabouts, and upon questioning Williams they were told so many different stories that their suspicions were aroused, which resulted in his arrest.

A man named Huntington, who recently arrived here, worked with Williams last Monday in the grain fields for a farmer in that district. He states that Williams' actions were so suspicious that he thought the man was crazy. Huntington said Wednesday that Williams continually watched the road, and whenever a buggy or other vehicle passed on the road he immediately became very nervous, inquire who it was, and stop work to watch until they had gone out of sight. His actions so attracted Huntington's attention that he inquired of some of the men on the ranch what was the matter with him.

Huntington also states that about 10:30 in the morning, while working in the field, Williams became so nervous that he said he was going home. Huntington, however, persuaded him to stay until noon and finish the work.

Williams' stories concerning McLeod's whereabouts were conflicting. One was that McLeod had got out of his wagon while coming to town Sunday, August 23, and that he had not seen him since. Another was that McLeod had taken his blankets and had gone over the hill to Jim Drury's place to go to work for him Monday. It was found later that he was not at Drury's place.

The bill of sale which Williams had in his possession, and which he claimed turned over to him McLeod's effects, has been lost, according to Williams. He showed it to a man named Morgan, and Morgan states that it was nothing more than a receipt.

When asked about this by friends of McLeod Williams is said to have made the statement that he did not have to show it to anybody except when it came to a show-down. Also it is said that he remarked to several that there were "too many people taking an interest in his affairs."

A notice with McLeod's signature had been left on the door stating that

PREPARING FOR SCHOOL MONDAY

ALL GRADES AT CENTRAL AND RIVERSIDE BUILDINGS—TEXT-BOOKS WILL BE FURNISHED TO PUPILS

The Grade schools will open Monday morning, September 7, at 9 a. m. for organization and for the listing of textbooks, and when that is done the pupils will be dismissed for the rest of the day.

All grades will be taught this year at the Riverside school, as well as at the Central school, while six grades will be handled at both the Shippington and the Mills Addition schools, the Mills and Shippington Seventh and Eighth graders may attend either the Riverside or Central, as they may elect.

As the people decided last June that they desired free textbooks, the school board has deemed it proper to furnish new books free this year, that is, only such books as are actually needed for pupils advancing or new ones in the district.

Pupils having old books that they can use will be required to bring the same at the opening of school, this means that if the family possesses any books that pupils coming from that family can use they will be required to use them.

On account of the crowded condition at the Central school, the school authorities are urging pupils who are living near the line or Sixth street, to attend Riverside, to relieve the congestion as much as possible. The conditions at Riverside are in every way to the very great advantage of the pupils attending there, the building being larger, the rooms and the halls are correspondingly larger, the grounds are much larger, and we find that the health of the pupils ranks higher at Riverside than at some of the other schools in the city.

The danger to pupils at Central school on Main street far exceeds that of crossing the bridge at the river. A congested condition on the school grounds is always a menace.

Williams was taking care of his place, and that he had gone for a trip. This is not in McLeod's handwriting.

Huntington claims that it is not the notice he saw a few days ago, but that the one he saw was dated the 23d without any month, while this one was dated August 24th. Also he said that the first notice said that anything Williams did was all right.

It is believed by the officials that Williams wrote both notices and placed them there himself. McLeod is an exceptional good penman, and these notices were written in a cramped shape.

Farmers in that district are doubtful if McLeod would leave Williams in charge, as it is stated that he had remarked that he would like to get rid of Williams, and did not like to have him around the place.

A wire sent to Portland last night to ascertain whether or not McLeod had registered in that city recently had not been answered today.
