

Peace In Sight In One War

Wise Ones See Signs of Surrender of the Federals

Mediation Discussions Not Considered by the Allies Until Gilmore Is Eliminated From the Dictatorship of the New League. This Means Its End

By HAL SHERIDAN
(Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Will this winter see the end of the baseball war? Many men high in baseball circles are close to the ones who dictate in both the American and National leagues—say that it will.

Just how the windup of this conflict will be brought about, though, is a much mooted question. Out of the many opinions advanced by the ones supposed to know, one fact stands out very prominently. That is that when the time comes for settlement—when organized baseball opens its arms and takes the young Federal league into them with a kiss of forgiveness—a person by the name of James Gilmore won't be among those present.

This Gilmore person, who has really made the Federal League, has incurred the everlasting enmity of the powers that be in the organized baseball fold. These persons have made it emphatically plain that if they ever do consent to a peace parley with the Federals that Gilmore will not be admitted to it. And their one demand that they will insist upon to the bitter end will be the elimination of Gilmore from the spotlight.

To one in the bleachers this doesn't look very good. If the Federal League club owners stand for this they won't be showing much of a sportsmanlike spirit. And, judging by past performances, they are liable to give Gilmore the gate, if by so doing they can land in the select circle themselves.

To illustrate, we will recite the case of one James Powers—the real father of the Federal League. He has dropped out of sight completely, it seems, and still it was only by his diligent work that the league really opened its first season. And he was handed his passport before the end of that season.

The league directors excused their action in decorating him with the Ancient Order of the Tin Can by saying that they discovered that he was not a good executive. He was too much of a dreamer, they said.

Grant all this, and yet Powers was not treated with fairness. In recognition of what he had done for the league, the league should have taken care of him in some manner.

Powers long has had the "bug" of organizing a third major league. His maiden effort in that line was pulled in 1912, when he tried to put the Columbian League over. That lasted—in a way—almost a season. It was a very sorry spectacle while it lasted, as an imitation of a major league, but it served its purpose—it implanted the germ of a third major league in the minds of several worthy men.

The next year found Powers on the job again, and by that time he had lined up a representative men as spring of 1913, Powers put through the organization of the Federal Baseball League of the United States. That was the birth of the Federal League of today.

This has all been recited just to show what Powers did for the Federal League. We told you what the Federal League did to Powers—lost him in the shuffle. And now we wonder will they do Jim Gilmore the same way if organized baseball insists upon it as one of the terms of settlement?

The Federal League will have to effect some kind of a settlement if it hopes to stay out of the bankruptcy courts. The main reason for this is that the league is carrying enough ball players—or men and boys posing as such—to supply three or four leagues.

Not having any minor Federal League, where it can send players that it doesn't need, the Federal League has to keep on its payroll all youngsters who fail to make good or old-timers who are slipping. The reason they don't dare to let any of these go outright is plain. If they did they would scare away many stars whom they hope to lure from the American and National leagues. These athletes wouldn't hop to the Feds if they feared they would be set free, with nowhere to go if they started to go badly.

Each team in the Federal League has from thirty to forty players. As twenty-five is the maximum carried by any club during its regular playing season, it can be seen easily that the Feds are totting an enormous expense account.

The Feds have taken in at the gate enough money to break even under ordinary conditions. But with the added expense of a vast number of players not needed, the league probably will have a good sized deficit as a whole.

Warship Bottled in the Baltic Sea, and German Admiral

The whole German navy, with the exception of submarines and a few cruisers, has been bottled up in the Baltic Sea and about Heligoland since the war began. On two or three occasions some ships of the navy have been able to get out long enough to be reached by the British fleet in the North Sea. But most of the attacks attempted on the British battleships have been by mines and in the use of submarines. Admiral von Holtzendorf, who is in command of the navy, has had to be content with waiting. Very little news of fights between German and Russian battleships in the Baltic has been given out.

SHOT AT

Your attention—do we have it? LISTEN! Many a square meal is spoiled in the making by unwise grocers who think of profits rather than quality.

Stale butter, bad eggs, cheap coffee, poor potatoes, inferior off-brand canned goods, any one of which, to say the least, will spoil an otherwise perfect meal.

Some grocers make it a point of honor never to sell an article that is "off." They build up a reputation from which they are inseparable. Their WORD, as it were, is a trade mark, and becomes a force and power in their business.

WE KNOW IT. Our customers know it—others know it. And still there are others who should know it for their own sake.
