

Henry Ford a Foe to the Cigarette Habit

Henry Ford is more interested in the American boy than he is in Ford automobiles, and one indication of this fact is Mr. Ford's activity in enlisting American youth against the cigarette.

Not long ago Mr. Ford went on record in an authorized interview in which he explained his attitude toward cigarette smoking, and was careful to make it clear that his purpose is not to endeavor to reform men over 25 years of age, but that he hopes to educate young men under that age and boys to the evils of the cigarette, especially the deleterious effect on physical health.

Mr. Ford has compiled in a neat little book a brief statement of his position, reproduced a letter written him by Thomas A. Edison in which the electrical genius tells why he will not employ a cigarette smoker and also numerous letters and bits of testimony from men and women prominent in all walks of life. This testimony is overwhelmingly against the cigarette, and good practical and scientific reasons are given.

The book is issued under the title, "The Case Against the Little White Slaver." The first edition was long ago exhausted, so great was the demand from all quarters, but a new edition is ready now, and anyone may have a copy by writing to the Ford Motor company of Detroit for it.

African Turcos Selecting Spoils of War in Front of a French Church

This photograph shows an interesting incident of the French attack on the Germans retreating in the Meaux district. The Turcos, the fierce African troops called to the aid of France, have stopped in front of a church at the village of Neufontier, after driving frightened Germans before them, to gather the equipment of the retreating soldiers. The accoutrements of the Germans, thrown in roads and fields as they fled, were picked up by the Turcos and piled in front of the church.

MOVIE SHIPPING LAW EFFECTIVE

TIGHTLY CLOSED METAL CASES, ENCLOSED IN SPARK PROOF BOXES, MUST BE USED FOR FILM TRANSPORTATION

United Press Service

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 1.—New shipping safety regulations for moving picture films went into effect today. Under orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission, beginning today, "movie" films cannot be shipped except in tightly closed, metal cases, enclosed in a strong, spark-proof wooden box, or in spark-proof boxes made of sheet iron.

Under former law regulations films could be shipped in fibre-board cases. The new film regulations are part of those governing shipment of explosives and other dangerous articles.

BOGUE RIVER VALLEY SPORTSMEN CROSS THE BRIDGE TO ENJOY THE DUCK SHOOTING IN THIS VICINITY

That Medford sportsmen are becoming more and more interested in the duck shooting in Klamath county is attested by the following excerpts from the local columns of the Medford papers:

A number of local hunters are hunting ducks on Klamath Lake this week.

Sid Brown, Frank Wilson and Wm. Miller leave this morning by auto for Klamath county, where they will spend the remainder of the week hunting ducks, which are reported to be most plentiful in the Klamath district this fall.

Joe Williams leaves this morning on a duck hunting trip to Klamath Lake.

W. A. Bates, Court Hill and Chas. Palm left yesterday for Klamath Lake on a duck hunting trip.

Schools Win
Jackson county schools won first on arrangement of exhibits and fourth in school exhibits for Western Oregon at the state fair at Salem, according to a message from R. No Chance
After making diligent search over many of the surrounding hills, and raking Mount Nebo from end to end, it can be safely asserted that the wireless station which has been reputed as located somewhere in this vicinity cannot be found. The nearest approach to any scent has been to discover some people who still have some stock certificates in a wireless company floated here some years ago. Thus fades our only chance to become mixed up with any complications that might bring us into the limelight connected with the present war.—Roseburg News.

Ethical Dentists Active
Local dentists held a meeting here on Thursday, at which time considerable discussion prevailed with regard to the proposed new dental law, which has been initiated in Oregon, and which will appear on the ballot at the November election. The act is entitled, "A measure to regulate the practice of dentistry in Oregon and to repeal all acts in conflict herewith and therewith. Several of the dentists in attendance at that evening's meeting expressed the belief that the passage of this proposed law would be a great step backward and a reflection upon the good name of the state of Oregon.—Roseburg Review.

English Woman Writes on the Kaiser Was Tutor for Years to the German Princess

Tactless, Hustling But Nevertheless Earnest Monarch Is Described From a New Angle, That of His Life in His Home

United Press Service

LONDON, Oct. 2.—One of the best pen pictures drawn of Kaiser Wilhelm, according to those who have known the War Lord, is contained in a book of memoirs just published by Miss Anne Topham, who for some years acted as English governess to the kaiser's daughter. The "recollections" of Miss Topham contain, besides its pictures of the kaiser himself, a number of interesting stories of the kaiser's court.

From the numerous stories and incidents in the book in which his majesty figures it is possible to reconstruct a very graphic and by no means unattractive portrait of the ruler of Germany, alike in his function of monarch and his role of husband and parent.

The "papa" of the princess is very much nearer the kaiser of high politics, alternately gushing and ferocious, always cocksure, and continually doing indiscreet things. Everybody around him is kept ever on the move or ready to be on the move next moment; every one with whom he is associated is expected to be as interested in everything as he is himself.

His son, the crown prince, is not more typically the tactless, hustling, grandiose, yet childlike, earnest but superficial Hohenzollern than is the kaiser.

All things are plain to the kaiser, not excepting the mysterious ways of Providence; all excepting the suffragettes. He admits that he does not understand them.

"Why, in heaven's name, do women want the vote," he asks; and he threatened one charming lady suffragist whom he met at Kiel, and who promised a suffragist invasion of Germany, that if the Pankhurst section went to Germany, he would give them much worse than two days' detention in Holloway, with newspapers to read and flowers to decorate their cells.

What exactly the suffragettes, Wilhelm II. did not make clear; but perhaps this problem need not worry us very much more.

Although a genial man in his leisure, the kaiser jokes with difficulty. For instance, plenty of us could have thought of a more diplomatic jape to drop upon an English governess who was seeing her German princess pupil parade for the first time in the uniform of the Death's Head Hussars than the statement: "She will ride at the head of the first regiment that invades England."

The sniggering rudeness of the remark was met by a counter from Miss Topham (whom the kaiser came to speak of as "our English Dreadnought"); but it remains one of those things that might very well have been put differently. Most of the kaiser's recorded outbursts of humor—and some of his utterances as statesman—are open to the same criticism.

Let it not be assumed from this that the kaiser of Miss Topham's book and our visualization is an altogether disagreeable person. Far from it. Not at least just now, when we are fighting him for our lives and for our conception of civilization, would we overlook his many appreciations of aspects of our English country and people.

More than once he has paid tribute to the beauty and attraction of the English countryside. He has a poem of Kipling framed and hung in his room; his favorite book as a boy was "Frank Fairleigh"; he likes Dickens; he buys his horses in England or Ireland; he sends to London for his tea;

he worships Reynolds and Gainsborough and Nelson.

In fact, one could fill a column with his numerous English preferences. That we are at war with so very English a foreigner is one of life's larger ironies; yet we are at war with him (and he with us) more bitterly and tragically than we yet fully realize.

ized Europe. That the kaiser "means nothing" by them adds to their significance.

The schoolboyish side of the kaiser, although it may at times embarrass needlessly the solemn and deserving person, one condemns less severely. Indeed, it is possible to be pleased by some of Miss Topham's storyettes of the mutual mischief of the kaiser and his daughter.

One day the princess shocked her governess by making the "pop" of a champagne cork with her lips and cheeks, and then imitating the gurgle of wine into a glass. "Whoever taught you these unladylike accomplishments?" asked the governess. "S—ah! It was papa," came the gleeful answer. "He can do it splendidly." And she gurgled again in the hope of developing by long practice a talent equal to his.
