Dogs Prove Invaluable to the Hospital Corps

The introduction of the dog into the field of battle has amply justified the experiment.

This is mainly due to the changed conditions of modern warfare, brought about by the immense range of artillery and small arms. In the war of the past few years the mortality among the wounded was very high, owing to the fact that the medical and ambulance men could make only a casual inspection of the battlefield. In the Franco-German war 13,000 out of 129,000 casualties were reported missing. Many of these men must have endured indescribable agonies, their groans and cries unheeded before they "went out," and it was with the idea of saving life on the field of battle that the education of the war dog was undertaken by volunteer societies in Germany.

Today the ambulance dog is doing his work of mercy among the wounded. This gallant fellow requires no artificial searchlights on the battlefield by night. He relies solely on his wonderful power of scent. In 1906, during the maneuvers of the Austrian troops, 200 men were left lying on the field to represent the wounded. The stretcher bearers of the hospital department, greatly hurried, overlooked thirty-eight of the men. Within twenty minutes the war dogs, trained in Vienna, had found them all. Each carries about his neck a flash of brandy or soup, and a roll of bandages. The wounded man makes what use he can of this relief, and then gives his four-legged "pal" his cap or belt. These the dog conveys to the ambulance attendants, who are systematically beating every corner of the battlefield.

In Manchuria the Russians employed a great number of specially trained English collies, and Captain Pers-ky of Court Keller's staff sent in a special report concerning the pack of seven war dogs directly under his command.

"In a recent engagement," the captain wrote, "fifty-three men were found more or less badly wounded in quite unexpected places, where the stretcher bearers and surgeons would never have dreamed of looking. Little bells are put around the dogs' necks to enable them to be followed more easily by the ambulance, especially when the darkness falls.

The Germans put a little saddle on their dogs. This contains a goodly supply of bandages and surgical dressings, while round the animal's neck is hung a little barrel containing medicinal stimulant.

On the other hand, Major Richardson of the British army, who has taken out his dogs to the front, thinks the dog's equipment should be as simple as possible. As the animals may have to cover every yard of an enormous battlefield, their movements should not be hampered. These clever creatures can render incalculable service in bringing succor to the wounded and life to the dying.

Count Zeppelin, Who Hopes to Make Destruction of London

Count Zeppelin, inventor and maker of the German dirigible which has spread terror throughout Belgium and France, is now hard at work on the problem of destroying London by an aerial attack in the night. The work of his airships at Antwerp and Paris, where they dropped bombs and killed some victims on the streets has been in the nature of an experiment for the great attack on London, Germans familiar with the policy of the war believe the attack on London will not be made until the army has established a base on the channel shore of Belgium or France, and this, they say, partly explains the desperate efforts of the German army to take a port on the channel. Count Zeppelin is at work improving his machines in the light of the experience in dropping bombs on Antwerp and Paris, in preparation for this attack to which the German nation looks forward.

ARTHUR D. HAY AND MISS EDITH LAWSON ARE MARRIED IN PORTLAND—WILL RESIDE IN KLAMATH FALLS

No longer can Arthur D. Hay "sit in" as Professor of British Military Tactics at the noontime sessions of the War College, gathered about The Herald's bulletin board, to thresh out the significance of the day's maneuvers. Hereafter, for first hand advice regarding the king's navy and the effects of the war price of English bulldogs, etc., to offset the claims of Bismark von Melhase and Blucher von Breitenstein, it will be necessary for all such questions to be peiled at Sir Rex o' Bord.

For be it known that Arthur D. has just enlisted under the banner of "double harness." He is the latest acquisition of the local benedict, and noontimes, he needs must hasten home to partake of "home cooked," and to split kindlings, instead of dallying to haggle over the import of the war news.

The wedding of Mr. Hay to Miss Edith M. Lawson was solemnized in East Portland Tuesday night, according to advices just received. The couple will soon be here, and will reside in Hot Springs addition. Mrs. Hay comes from a prominent Portland family, and she has a wide circle of friends in the Rose City.

RABID GREASERS OUSTED BY TEXAS

FEDERAL DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE BRANDS THESE MEN AS "UNDESIRABLE ALIENS," AND SENDS THEM HOME

United Press Service

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 5.—Listed as "undesirable aliens" by the federal department of justice today are names of many Mexicans prominent in the days of Diaz and Huerta. This city has always been largely Mexican, and here many revolutionary plots have been hatched.

The latest break between Villa and Carranza resulted in unusual activity in local Mexican political circles.

Then came the announcement that federal agents were determined to resort to deportation and extradition of all Mexican refugees believed to be aiding either by counsel or money in sowing revolutionary seeds in Mexico. A general exodus followed, and today the gathering places heretofore thronged with one-time prominent Mexicans were noticeably quiet. Dr. Urrutia, former Huerta cabinet member, has left the city. Several others are known to have purchased tickets for out-of-Texas points.

A clean up in El Paso is also in progress. The report that followers of Carranza were likely to demand the extradition of those who pledged allegiance to Huerta and were suspected of connection with executions in Mexico hastened the departure of several prominent Mexicans.

ELKINS MAY BE MAGISTRATE

There is a possibility that F. M. Cleaves may be defeated for justice of the peace for Crescent district, according to advices from that section. Jack Elkins was a strong contender for the office, his name being written on the ballot by many.

One Crescent man says that it is possible that Elkins received more votes in this way than did Cleaves, whose name was printed on the ballot. The votes for Elkins were not counted at Crescent, however, and some of the board thought this could not be done.

These will be counted by the county canvassing board.

Big Naval Battle Is Apparently Coming

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The admiralty is unprecedentedly active today, and the censorship regarding naval movements is the strictest yet.

There are persistent rumors of impending fighting. Undisguised alarm is shown in some places over the report that four German dreadnaughts and four armored cruisers, cleared for action, started seaward.

Unless the British have heard it, such a squadron could cause a great amount of damage to the British coast.

GUESTS WERE IN BED

United Press Service

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Six people were cremated and scores of others saved only by thrilling rescues by firemen and other guests when the Waverly hotel and lodging house was burned this morning.

The fire was at an early hour. The victims were either burned to death in their rooms or trampled in the crowded hallways.

LONG JOB AHEAD OF CANVASSERS

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE, CLERK AND DEPUTY START CHECKING OVER THE RESULTS OF THE ELECTION

Work of re-checking the votes cast at the various precincts Tuesday was started today by County Clerk DeLap, Deputy Charles F. De Lap, Justice of the Peace Gowen and Justice of the Peace Offield of Merrill.

Their job will be somewhat lengthy owing to the length of the ballot. Owing to the confused manner in which some of the returns were sent in this will be the only way to gain any information as to the results of the various amendments.
