ELECTION AND INDUSTRIES

SUMMARIES of Oregon election returns show that all of the twenty-seven measures and amendments on the ballot affecting industries, taxation and investments have been defeated.

The press of the state was almost unanimous against these proposed laws—condemning many of them as radical and freak propositions, and the result is defeat of a vicious system of legislation.

For some of these measures, campaigns were made and a great deal of money spent in advertising them, and strong organizations were put back of them, but the voters had made up their minds to check the system.

Some of the measures were endorsed by the state senate, labor organizations and the so-called People's Power League for Direct Legislation, that has been an effective combination in the past.

A number of the proposed laws that have gone down in defeat were backed by the organized women's clubs of the state, but an educated public sentiment on the part of the general electorate doomed them all to defeat.

The voters are aroused to the fact that this system is a vicious abuse of the initiative and referendum, and they have wisely saved direct legislation by destroying the abuse.

Many of the proponents of these defeated laws and amendments will undoubtedly come before the legislature with propositions to put them over, perhaps in changed form.

This has been done in the past. When the voters have snored under a so-called progressive measure, it has bobbed up before the general assembly and been lobbed through.

The advocates of resurrecting any of the defeated measures will be given a cold shoulder for the first time by the Oregon legislature, if all signs fail not.

The verdict of the voters is for a let-up in the legislative activity that interferes with industries and business.

THE RUSSIAN army was slow in getting started. Now it is equally slow in stopping.

He used to be a business man. And had a whopping trade; From dawn to dark he used to plan, And quite a wad he made. But now he lives a life of ease, By no ambition fired; And in the business circles he's Declared to have "Retired."

It seems depression came; the skies Of business all were dull. He thought that he'd economize Because there was a lull. He stopped his advertising—so In memory he grew dim. He didn't retire from business—no, The business retired from him.

JUST THE signing of an acceptance of the new reclamation law is all that is necessary right now to make the Klamath farmers' load a heap lighter.

Hindoos Shaving on Field of Battle

Just because the Hindoo fighters of Great Britain have been transported to another clime, their customs have not changed, and this photograph shows them shaving each other on the field of battle in France. No barber's chair for them. Their ancient method, which was in vogue before European civilization was dreamed of, is still used by them.

Prince Oscar Is Seriously Wounded

The horrors of war were too much for Prince Oscar, one of the five sons of the German emperor. Nevertheless he insisted on going to the front when the war began. The result is that now he is in a hospital, and the physicians do not hold out great hope for his recovery.

Undoubtedly the most interesting motion picture ever shown in Klamath Falls was the six reel "Paul J. Rainey's African Hunt," at the Star theater last night. This picture was made in a field that has been rarely used, and it holds the unique position of being an educational film as well as a thriller.

After witnessing the picture, one realizes the immense cost, a quarter of a million, for there were about 400 men, white and black, besides scores of horses and dogs. Some of the film may seem a little dim, but this is overlooked by all, for, unfortunately, wild animals will not come into properly lighted studios to have their picture taken, and the times the pictures can be taken depend upon the time the camera is closest, not upon the best lights.

American dogs tracking leopards and lions, treading the leopard, climbing the tree and driving him to his death at the hands of the pack below, cornering a lion and worrying him—these are a few of the exciting hunt pictures, which cause all to sit up and take notice. The capturing of trapped jackals, hyenas, and other animals is shown at real close range.

But about the most remarkable picture of all is a water hole, where animals of many varieties come to slake their thirst. The scene is one that appears more like a leaf from a children's animal story than like a reality. A troop of monkeys and baboons are discovered playing about the spring, and a herd of gazelle is seen a short distance off. While the gazelle are drinking, other animals approach, including a herd of zebra, and each animal takes its turn at drinking. Even the giraffe is not missing, for two appear for water. The only noticeable trouble between any of the animals is when a giraffe kicks a zebra for drinking too long. A family of umbrella eared elephants also put in an appearance, and their course in training the young is highly amusing.

The rhinoceros is among the animals shown at the water hole. In addition, another film is shown of a rhinoceros which, discovering the camera, was charging it until slain. Ostriches in all stages of growth and in anger, lions—in fact, a large variety of animals are shown in one of the most interesting pictures imaginable. This will be repeated tonight.

Tonight the Orpheus will present an unusually stirring picture program in addition to four amateur acts. "The Coast Guard's Bride," a two reel special, comes highly spoken of. This deals with life on the sea coast, and is replete with exciting situations. "In the Sultan's Garden," featuring Mary Pickford, and "Maggie's Honest Lover," a roaring comedy, complete the picture program. Four acts will be staged by local talent, among which is Mr. Kinnear, whose singing always pleases.

A New Departure

WELL KNOWN FACTS WILL BE PUT TO THE TEST

From our wide experience in merchandising we have reached the conclusion that Klamath Falls has reached the stage where it should have a strictly cash store, and will continue to run our store on a cash basis.

We therefore request our friends and patrons not to ask us for credit—it would only embarrass us both, as

Construction Charges Are Due Dec. 1

Water Users Must Hurry to Get Extension Benefits

By Signing the Acceptances Before Then, Payment Will Be Much Lighter. Penalty for Delinquents

The following letter and telegram received by Project Manager J. G. Camp from Controller Ryan of the reclamation service, show the necessity for the water users' at once signing up the acceptances under the new law.

According to these letters, the payments under the new law must be made by December 1, or penalty must be collected.

Provision is also made that delinquent operation and maintenance charges, except those for the season of 1914, can be made a part of the unpaid construction charges, and paid in that way under the twenty year bill.

"I wish to again urge all settlers to not delay in signing up the acceptance of the new law. Don't put it off. Nothing else can be as important as this matter."

Following is the telegram:

"Secretary Lane has authorized the commission to announce that all unpaid operation and maintenance charges due prior to December 1st, 1914, may be added to and made a part of that portion of the construction charges remaining unpaid on that date as the basis for the assessment of the 2 per cent initial installment and the nineteen additional installments provided for by the terms of the reclamation extension act. This does not apply to operation and maintenance charges for the irrigation season of 1914."

The letter follows:
"Subject—Bills for Collection of Water Right Charges, Klamath Project."

"1—You are instructed to immediately render bills for the construction charges due May 1, 1914, in accordance with existing public notices. Each of these bills should bear a statement which may be put on by rubber stamp: 'If acceptance of the reclamation extension act is filed as provided by law, payment may be made on the basis of 2 per cent on the amount of the construction charge remaining unpaid on December 1, 1914, to-wit: $.....' This stamp is being ordered, and will be sent you immediately."

"2—Upon the presentation of an acceptance of the terms of that act, requiring payment of any penalties which may have accrued. You will notice that under the terms of Section 3 of the extension act the first 1 per cent penalty is added, if payment is not made when due, that is, it should be added on December 2. Subsequent 1 per cent penalties will be added on the first day of each month.

"3—For the purpose of illustration the account of H. L. Rogers, Serial No. 74, is used. Mr. Rogers has 34 acres of irrigable land at the construction charge of $30 per acre, making a total construction charge of $1,020. He has paid five installments, the first being $108, the second $108, the third $108, the fourth $108, the fifth $108, a total of $540. The balance remaining unpaid December 1 will, therefore, be $480. The amount which you will call upon him to pay on that date will be 2 per cent of this unpaid balance, or $9.60. In computing this 2 per cent, fractions of less than one-half cent may be dropped, and in case of fractions of one-half cent or more the next higher cent will be taken.

"4—Your attention is especially directed to the fact that you are to render bills in accordance with existing public notices to all water users. Upon the filing of acceptance, you will render appropriate bills under the extension act. Where acceptance is filed after December 1, penalties will accrue, and should be collected as stated in paragraph 1. The extension act is mandatory as to the penalties, and they must be collected whenever they have accrued under the terms of the law. You will refuse to receive any payment which does not include all accrued penalties.

New Way to Figure Parcel Post Rates

United Press Service

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Nov. 11.—Calculus, adding machine or hours of mental toil are not necessary for the solution of parcel post rates, said George Rogers, a local postal clerk, today, who ought to know.

Rogers has devised a table by which, he claims, rates may be rapidly computed with the aid of a parcel post "zone" map. Rogers has just completed the table, though the rates have been in effect two years.

For the first and second zones, for instance, under Rogers' plan, the rate is equal to the number of pounds of the parcel plus four cents. The table follows:

First and second zones, the postage equals number of pounds, plus 4 cents.
Third zone, twice the number of pounds, plus 3 cents.
Fourth zone, four times the number of pounds, plus 2 cents.
Fifth zone, six times the pounds, plus 2 cents.
Seventh zone, 10 times number of pounds, plus 1 cent.
Eighth zone, 12 cents per pound.

under no circumstances will we extend credit to anyone.

It is a well known fact that the merchant who does a credit business is obliged to add additional profit to his goods in order to make up for his credit losses. In other words, the man who pays his bills is obliged to pay for the man who does not pay his bills. This additional profit you will not have to pay if you trade at this store.

Every freight brings us new goods that are marked with a small margin of profit, which our cash method enables us to do, while the balance of the Atkinson and Hector stocks will still be sold at the sale prices which we have maintained since opening this store in September.

The combining of these two stocks in one store room crowds us, and on some lines we are over-stocked. These we must cut and reduce before moving into our new home at Eighth and Main streets next month.

The very generous patronage given us since starting has brought us to realize that there is an opening here for a cash store that will carry a good line of merchandise at a reasonable profit and treat the people fairly. This we will do, and respectfully ask for a fair share of your business.

Very respectfully,
