SUIT IS SETTLED OUT OF COURT

KARICOW DISCOVERS THAT HE WAS CHARGED WITH LUMBER HE HAD PURCHASED FOR OTHER PARTIES

The matter of the law suit of Ackley Brothers against E. E. Karicow and Uwan Karicow, which was filed in the circuit court some days ago, has been fully settled by John Karicow.

It seems that at the time the lumber was purchased from Ackley Brothers it was not all intended for him, but the parties securing the lumber had the whole amount charged to Mr. Karicow.

Mr. Karicow has always borne a good reputation for honesty in this community, and has settled the suit, even though he felt he was imposed upon.

TELLING A NATION WHAT'S WHAT

New England speaks its message of mills and factories to the Great West. The West tells the East and the South of its grain, its fruits, its meats and its food stuffs. The East and South repeat in turn the stories of the products they make for the good and up-keep of mankind.

Daily the advertising columns of The Herald, and other good newspapers throughout the land, tell a nation what is going on—what is being done to make living worth while.

Newspaper advertising in reality builds cities, puts new life in localities and fires the individual to greater and better effort in his stride of progress.

To some this may seem a bit boastful. But no reader of The Herald who considers his newspaper advertising seriously can fail to realize the tremendous power it exerts throughout the community.

Newspaper advertising is a national distributor of facts and information which none should neglect. As a most vital force in the nation, it is recognized alike by manufacturer, producer, distributor, the merchant and the public.

It pays to shop in The Herald before you shop in the stores; 91 per cent of the circulation of this paper goes direct into the homes.

In a Pitiable Condition

Baby Is Born to a Typhoid Stricken Household

One of the most pitiable cases ever reported to the city authorities has just come to light on Conger avenue, the family being residents of the old Conger home.

To the rear of the house, and on a lower level, is a spring, partly enclosed in concrete, but so situated that all of the seepage water for that section flows into it and contaminates the spring. Besides this, the spring is partly filled with cans and bottles.

The family, it develops, has been using this spring as a source of water supply. As a result, the oldest child, a little girl of three years or less, has been stricken with typhoid, and has been without medical attention.

The house is somewhat isolated, and the first the neighbors knew of the family's condition was when the husband spoke to some women of his wife's condition. These women, when they reached the house, found that the wife had, unassisted, given birth to a child, performing all of the necessary duties in this connection as best she could.

Entering the house, the women were startled to see the mother sitting up in bed, partly dressed, and hugging close to her the sick child and the new-born babe, as yet unbathed. There was no stove or fire in the room. On the kitchen fire was a kettle of unpeeled potatoes, the dinner the husband was preparing.

The women at once notified Dr. Wright of the terrible condition in which the family was discovered, and he at once investigated, and found the little girl to be suffering with typhoid. He reported the matter to the city officials, and was told to remove the little sufferer to the hospital if he deemed it best in order to save her life by giving her the proper amount of care.

The doctor is also working to improve the condition of the mother and the new-born child.
