The tenth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Syd B. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Evans, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Bellman, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bellman, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Wilson, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lewis. In honor of the first anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bellman, a number of friends quietly gathered at their home Thursday evening to help them celebrate the occasion. The affair was planned by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Bellman, at whose home the merry-makers first met. There it was learned that the younger Bellmans had gone to the movies, so the assemblage decided to go to their home and await their return. Entrance was effected through an open window. The door was then opened, and by the time all had entered, found seats and extinguished the lights. Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Bellman were seen approaching. Mrs. Bellman was the first to enter, and while she was at first slightly frightened by the dim outline of someone's head, this feeling was soon overcome by one of joy, when she switched on the lights, and the couple saw a house full of friends assembled to wish them many happy returns of the day. Mrs. Bellman was then busied for a while in opening the gifts of cotton goods, which were in keeping with the anniversary. The remainder of the evening was delightfully spent in playing cards and merry-making, and at the conclusion of play, refreshments were served. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Bellman, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lewis, Dr. and Mrs. Maxwell M. Long, Mrs. Burge Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Syd Evans, Mrs. Florence Marquette and Miss Jennie Harris.

SOME MINOR WAR NEWS FROM EUROPE

United Press Service BERLIN, Oct. 28.—(By mail to New York)—Even chess is having a part in this great war. Such an eminent master of pawns, rooks and castles as Dr. Edmund Lasker, the champion of the world, compares the campaign now being fought on French territory with the ancient and honorable chess.

For example, he draws an analogy between the radical change in chess tactics instituted by Morphy and carried on by Steinitz and the present grand tactics of war.

Today the advantage in both military and chess tactics is gained by slow preparation and systematic execution. Final victory is achieved by the gradual building up of small advantages, robbing the enemy of the ability to move and then forcing them into defeat.

Lasker has made a study of the campaign in France, and this is what he says, in part:

"At present, when on a line extending over 200 kilometers, French and Germans are opposing each other well covered in trenches, a weakening effect on either position remains very slight. The operations which bring about a decision—rapidity of attack on a gap in the center—are impracticable in such a position as the present. "For the cavalry there is nothing for the infantry very little to do; the artillery alone has the word. Day in and day out, the artillery throws its shots on the artillery of the enemy. The effect is slow, because the troops are well protected, almost invisible, and standing nowhere in massed formation. A turn of the flanks is an operation of great difficulty, as, with the length of the front, there is hardly room for the development of a flanking body.

"In short, in the present position of affairs, a general's problem is quite analogous to the task of a chess champion who has to take his opponent's strong position. And probably it will be the same mental auxiliaries that will serve to provide the solution.

"The position is a very favorable one for the Germans, because its strategy, which may be distinctly seen, requires a great deal of time. The next objective point of our army is Verdun. This will fall, unless the crown prince's and Bavarian's plans miscarry.

"In the former event, the French will have to fall back one the line of Toul-Chalons, but Toul, vulnerable as it is on three sides, will be destroyed. Epinal and Nancy will then become untenable. This development appears unavoidable so long only as the French do not succeed in forcing back our main army."

The fifth birthday of Master Rudolph Jacobs was celebrated Thursday afternoon by a party at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Jacobs, which was attended by Zepha and Jean Rogers, Dorothy and Don Dunham, Hope Gordon, Elizabeth, Howard and H. C. Graham, Ruth Cofer, Beatrice Gale, Mildred Hutchinson, Walker Dearing, Thelma Ward, Constance Fisher and Lucille Henline. Guessing games and romping games played on the lawn were enjoyed to the utmost by the youngsters. A splendid birthday dinner was served to the little guests during the course of the afternoon, the table and dining room being decorated in a manner appropriate to Thanksgiving time.

The first session of the art department of the Woman's Library Club was held Friday afternoon at the Library Club, with twenty-five or thirty interested ladies in attendance, and if the first meeting is to be accepted as a criterion, this department will soon prove one of the most interesting in the club's work. All of the ladies in attendance were greatly elated with the work as started, and are anxious for the time of the next meeting to arrive. Instructions in tatting, crocheting and embroidery were given under the direction of Mrs. Robert E. Wattenburg, in charge of the department, and much headway was made by beginners, while some partly versed in these arts gained some knowledge that will be beneficial to them.

"Acquitted," a powerful photodrama, will come to the Ophreus Sunday and Monday. The action of this feature centers around the prosecution of an innocent party merely on circumstantial evidence. Miss Betty Nansen, the famous tragedienne, is featured in this offering. Two reels of comedy will complete an unusually strong six-reel program.

The second episode of "The Trey of Hearts," the greatest serial ever exhibited in this city, was shown at the Ophreus last night to a capacity house. Never is there a dull moment in this wonderful picture, and the audience is kept in a state of suppressed excitement from beginning to end. This program will be repeated this evening.

Monday we will receive another invoice of the most popular mid-winter shapes, in finest quality of Lyons Velvet and Plush. Values $7 to $9, on sale next week at $2.95. GERTRUDE & CO.
