

Two "Bad Boys" Made Over by Participation in the War

Two English Lads Who Were Sent to Reformatories Have Been Awarded Victoria Crosses and Are Heroes of Home Villages

By P. M. SARLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Dec. 15.—(By mail to New York)—Here's the story of two "bad boys" who made good in the great European war.

Formerly the despair of their parents and teachers, Driver Job Henry Drain, 37th Battery Royal Field Artillery, and Lance-Corporal William Fuller, of the Royal Welsh Regiment, are now popular heroes and the pride of the towns of which they were once considered the disgrace. For the "bad boys" of Barking and Swansea have won the little bronze crosses, which enable them to place the letters "V. C." after their names, and which put them on the roll of England's greatest heroes for all time. Barking in Essex and Swansea, in Wales, which two towns are far apart—perhaps Drain and Fuller may never meet, but their stories are sufficiently similar to tell together.

Drain is the son of a Barking laborer, and as a boy he never made any pretense about wishing to rise in the world. He hated school, and played truant as often as he dared. His teacher at the little back-lane church school remonstrated with him and punished him in vain. Drain's ambition in life was to mind cows. He could not work up any enthusiasm for the three "R's". He understood cows, and preferred to be with cows, and when he was kept away from them and forced to go to the school, he made himself a general nuisance. He was placed in the Walthamstow Truant school.

Job throve exceedingly on the regular life at the reform farm, and curiously enough, took readily to the physical and military drill part of the curriculum. He was a clean-built, well-set-up youth of sixteen and when three years ago, he was told that he must choose a career and leave his place of detention. He selected to join the army, and entered the Royal Field Artillery as a "boy."

"Boy" Drain found horses quite as fascinating as he had formerly found cows, and proved so good a horseman that on reaching the military age of seventeen he was mustered driver, and appointed to the 37th Battery. He was eighteen and one-half when the great war broke out, and his battery was one of the first in the field, having moved to France with the Irish division. At Mons and during the famous retreat, Drain did his duty, and looked after his pair of gun horses in fine style, but it was at La Cateau, on August 28, that he had the opportunity of showing that bad boys at school were not necessarily incorrigible.

There his battery got into a tight corner, and it seemed certain that the guns must be captured by the advancing Germans. Guns are the apple of an artilleryman's eye, and the officers called for volunteers to save them. Most of the gunners had been killed, but with a comrade, Driver Frederick Luke, the "Bad Boy of Barking" dashed through a hail of bullets and hitching up his trousers brought back three guns in succession. Before the two heroes got the third gun away the German infantry were within a hundred yards but the "worst boy in the school" never flinched, and with his comrade galloped back to the battery with the precious field pieces.

Both were awarded Victoria Crosses, and one of the first things Drain received was a telegram from the Mayor of Barking: "Heartiest congratulations. The town of Barking is proud of you."

Then came a similar message from the Walthamstow reform farm, and the teacher who had given him up in despair. The teacher who has some skill with the brush, is painting a portrait of the hero to hang up in the school in which he was reckoned the worst boy.

After Driver Drain, V. C., agreed that it was "worth while." Curiously enough, Drain's father carried about with him all day a newspaper containing an account of his son's heroism and reward, without knowing a word about it until a fellow workman drew his attention to it in the evening.

Lance-Corporal Fuller's story is almost the same.

The "Bad Boy of Swansea" was incorrigible until taken in hand by the Swansea Industrial school. He began to acquire a respect for discipline and joined the Royal Welsh regiment, in which he proved himself a smart soldier and was soon promoted to lance-corporal.

He cheerfully performed all the duties entailed by the "half-for-nothing" rank, of which Kipling wrote, then came the war, and the Welsh were in all the early fighting.

It was at the battle of the Aisne, when on September 14, near Chivry, the regiment suffered fearful losses that Fuller's chance came. Outnumbered six to one, the Royal Welsh fought desperately to hold their position. Officer after officer went down among them Captain Haggard, the Swansea "bad boy's" company commander, who fell, shouting "Stick to it, Welsh. Nobly the bad boy and his few remaining comrades 'stuck to it,' and when retirement was inevitable, Fuller went back for his officer. He had to run a hundred yards under murderous rifle and machine-gun fire, before he found his captain. Captain Haggard, knowing himself to be mortally wounded, ordered the plucky "non-com" to go back, but Fuller insisted upon picking him up and carrying him on his shoulders to a place of comparative safety.

In the dining room of the correctional school, which reclaimed the V. C. here, and prevented him from drifting into the ranks of the inveterate wastrels, the education authorities of Swansea are putting up a brass plate, inscribed with the wording of the official despatch recording Fuller's heroic deed.

While millions have been added to investments by public service corporations in Clatsop county, the total assessed valuations this year are $20,000 less than last year.

Prince of Wales at the Front

This is the Prince of Wales in uniform as he appears when at the front or near the front in France. Some despatches have had it that the prince has been under fire, but few of those whose business it is to report the war believe this is true. The prince has been sent about the camps to show himself to the soldiers and cheer the Britishers who like to believe their future king is a soldier. In this photograph he seems very pale and thin, which may indicate that the hardships he has encountered have not agreed with him.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

SAYS WE MUST KEEP FEET DRY, AVOID EXPOSURE AND EAT LESS MEAT

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well. (Paid Advertisement)

NEWS NOTES FROM THE RESERVATION

MAJOR WORDEN GETS THE GLAD HAND FROM HIS OLD INDIAN FRIENDS — COMINGS AND GOINGS OF THE REDS

(Herald Special Service)

KLAMATH AGENCY, Jan. 14.—H. P. Hammersley and wife, have left for Salt Lake city, where they will reside permanently, we understand. Mr. Hammersley was connected with the Modoc Point project for a long time, and the many friends of the couple hated to see them leave.

Mike Larkie went to Klamath Falls on a visit recently. He has returned to the Agency, where he is checking in Orville Elliott's general merchandise store.

Mrs. Elva Ball, an Indian woman who is engaged in stock raising, and who has a beautiful, large stock ranch on the Big Klamath Marsh, went to Klamath Falls recently on a business trip.

The new year brings a great fair at San Francisco. The Indians wonder if the fair will be worth seeing. Well, I guess yes, and a little more, too.

Major E. C. Worden, formerly Indian agent here, and his son-in-law, Barge Mason, were visitors on the reservation one day last week in their car. The major is highly respected on the reservation by the Indians, and is well known throughout the county. While here the major shook hands with a number of his old friends. The Indians believe that he got the wheels of their endeavor rolling toward civilization. We know him to be a hard worker and most highly respected wherever he goes.

Mrs. Amy Tice took her little girl to Klamath Falls for treatment by Dr. Hamilton. The girl has been ill for some time, and we hope she is improving.

Mrs. J. Palmer returned from Klamath Falls last week to take charge of the U. S. Indian school kitchen at the Agency.

William Crawford, a well respected Indian, passed through Chiloquin recently on his way to Klamath Falls, where he is undergoing medical treatment. Crawford has had stomach trouble for some time, but we are glad to learn that he is improving right along. His many friends extend their sympathy to this progressive man, and wish for his speedy recovery.

The man who eats apples has little desire to drink. BAGLEY'S APPLE JUICE should be more widely used.
