SUFFERINGS OF THE WOUNDED IN THE TRENCHES IS TERRIBLE AND TRANSPORTATION TO AID IS HARD

ended, the man had to be carried along a pathway down a 200 foot cliff. Here he was safe from bullets and shells, but a warm clean hospital bed was still hundreds of miles distant. Here he would have to be taken into a peasant's house where first aid men were on duty. There would be nothing but straw for him to lie upon. The first aid men would dash cold water in his face, wash his many wounds and bind them the best they could.

Then the wounded man would lie on the straw until nightfall, for it was necessary to carry him through a fling zone to get back to the infirmary, which was another little house in a town a mile distant. He would either be wheeled along the towpath of the canal on a stretcher made of two baby carriages, which were connected by a board, or a "charon" would carry him in an old boat. "Charon" was an old French peasant with long white whiskers. His boat was floored with straw and because he carried only the most gravely wounded man, who often died during the mile journey down the canal, we used to call him "Charon" and we named the canal the "Rix".

At the infirmary there were real surgeons, but they were pressed with work, and they were forced, of necessity, to perform their operations hastily, in an improved operating room.

If the wounded man was still alive, by this time he would be put into a Red Cross wagon or automobile or some other sort of a vehicle and carried thirty miles to a large town, (which I cannot for obvious reasons name) and here he would be put on the Red Cross train and started for Paris. His bed in the train might be a seat in a third, second or first class coach; or, if he was lucky, it might be a sheeted bed in a regular Red Cross car.

At last the train would arrive into Paris or into some other distant city of France where there are big hospitals. Scores of ambulances will be waiting in the railroad yards. The ambulance attendants will be running around, each seeking out the wounded men who are to be assigned to the hospital which he represents. To them he is only a number, or perhaps a chalk mark on the door of the car. They will put him on a stretcher and place him in a huge motor ambulance, perhaps with one or two men who have been wounded on distant battlefields, and the car will race through the streets of the city to the hospital, which once seemed to the sufferer so many miles away, and where warm white beds, gentle nurses, flowers and no responsibility await him. It is no wonder that the wounded men who reach the hospital wards sink back onto the pillows with a sigh of relief and smile when they catch the glimpse of the white nurses. Look back at the journey he has taken since that moment he was hit in the trenches and you can understand how a hospital ward looks like heaven to a wounded soldier.

To get into a hospital is one of a soldier's dreams, and there are very strict laws in all armies against men wounding themselves. In the French army this self-wounding is known as "mutilation", and the punishment is death. In our regiment an ex-convict who had been released after serving fifteen years in order to allow him to enter the army, persuaded another soldier to shoot him through the hand. In return for this favor he also punctured the hand of the soldier. When they came to have their wounds dressed the doctors noticed powder marks on their mangled hands, and the truth came out. Both men were executed.

FRENCH CHARGE GERMAN SURGEONS AMPUTATE TOO FREELY THE LIMBS OF WOUNDED ALLIES THEY ATTEND

But what France wants to know is that even if German surgeons as a rule are followers of this method—something of which the French surgeons are openly doubtful—was it applied with the same impartiality to the French wounded who fell into the hands of the Germans as it was to their own.

Great light is expected to be thrown upon this subject when the French wounded finally arrive from Germany. A thorough investigation will then be made both by French surgeons and government officials, and if suspicious which are now openly voiced, appear to be verified, France will submit the situation for international consideration.

Up to the present moment Germany has shown the most alertness in preparing for the exchange of these soldiers. Whether or not her scarcity of food is responsible for this is not known. The entire number of 2,600 are now gathered at Constance, Switzerland, where arrangements have just been completed by the Swiss government for their transportation into France. This will begin next week.

Special trains have been provided, each one of which will carry 250 of the helpless men. They will not only be in charge of sisters of the various Catholic orders and Red Cross nurses, but each train will have at its head a military commander. They will travel only at night, and will have the right of way over all other traffic on the Swiss railways. The last possible precaution has been taken, not only for their safety, but for every possible care and comfort until they are finally turned over to France.

The German mutilated soldiers who are to be exchanged are now being gotten together at Lyons. They will not number over 1,000, as the French insist that through the care of the French surgeons hundreds of German wounded were saved from amputations or other operations that would have rendered them unfit for service. Those, however, for whom there was no chance, but whose lives at least were saved, are now being taken at Lyons with every possible care from the military hospitals at Bourg, Roanne, Limoges, St. Yrieix, and other points and when the entire number is assembled the exchange will begin.

Coast League Games Are Started Today

United Press Service
SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—They're off in the Pacific Coast League.

The opening gun in the 1915 baseball season was fired today in three of the larger cities west of the Rockies, when the Coast League, one of the larger minor league organizations, got under way. San Francisco, Los Angeles and Salt Lake were the cities where Hot Stove Leagues were disbanded and the fans came into their own.

Here's the way they lined up: Oakland at San Francisco; Portland at Los Angeles; Vernon at Salt Lake. The usual ceremonies, including brass bands, parades and speeches preceded the games. And then the fans and fanettes settled down, so far as the Pacific Coast is concerned, to eight months of baseball.

The same old brand of predictions were voiced by the managers of the several clubs.

"Every man on my team is a champion," said "Happy" Hogan, manager of the Vernon Tigers, "and I can't see how they can keep us from annexing the pennant."

The five other managers were to the front with similar statements, but unbiased experts have declared the San Francisco club to be the greatest aggregation of players ever assembled in a minor league. This team was constructed by Harry Wolverton, former manager of the New York Highlanders.

Portland and Los Angeles also loom up as contenders. Several changes have occurred in the Pacific Coast League since the close of the 1914 season. Cal Ewing and Frank Lee, two of the best known baseball men in the country, disposed of their holdings in the San Francisco club to Henry Barry, formerly owner of the Los Angeles club. Barry disposed of his interests in the Los Angeles club to John Powers, son of Alderman Powers of Chicago.

After several disastrous seasons, the Sacramento franchise was sold to Salt Lake, one of the best baseball cities in the West. Cliff Blankenship is manager of the "Mormon" team.

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

SAYS EXCESS OF HYDROCHLORIC ACID IS CAUSE OF INDIGESTION

A well known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Epsom salts and take a tablespoonful in glasses of water before breakfast, twice a day, continuing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While water follows the Epsom salts, it is important to suspend the solids, remove the poisonous mass, clean the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus give the body a new flow of vital digestive juices.

The salts in question, and it is not the Epsom salt, is a natural mineral salt, which is not a medicine, but a natural product of nature, and is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble, with excellent results. (Read Advertisement)
