WOOD PAVEMENT—WHY NOT?

IN ANOTHER part of today's Herald is a statement by a prominent lumberman regarding the revival of wood block pavement throughout the world.

If New York, Chicago, Paris, Seattle, Boston and other cities believe wooden pavement is good for their streets it should be good enough for Klamath Falls' streets and roadways.

Lumber is the greatest of Oregon's products. Klamath county is one of the state's greatest lumbering centers, and red fir, which is meeting with little demand at present, is the ideal wood for paving.

We are all wont to talk about supporting home industry, and here is an ideal chance to do so. The Herald has on hand data regarding wood pavement, treatment of paving blocks, tests, etc., compiled by lumber publications and by the forestry service.

THE REASON that a woman, no matter how ponderous she is, speaks always about getting "a little dress" is perhaps the reason that a man always invites his friend to have "a little drink," no matter if they are after a quart schooner of suds.

THERE IS a difference between knowing you think and thinking you know.
A GOOD START WAS made last night toward a Klamath Falls band. This is a move we must all encourage.

SOME PEOPLE seem content to think that Klamath Falls has a great future. If they would only get in and do some consistent boosting work—like subscribing to the fund to maintain a representative at the exposition—they would hasten that future along.

THERE IS NO man in the world whom everybody believes is wise, just and good. At least one person will demur.

WE SUPPOSE the report of commencement of railroad activities south from Bend in the Shewlin timber sounds real depressing.

Use of Wood Block Is Spreading Over World

PORTLAND, April 21.—M. E. Ayer, president of the St. Johns Lumber company, who has given much study to wood blocks as a paving material, believes the Oregon product should stand a good opportunity in competition with other materials for paving the roads and streets of the state.

"Oregon is the great producer of lumber," said Mr. Ayer, "and it is being bought at distant places for paving purposes and hauled at a heavy expense by rail or water. If Paris, New York, London and other large cities have come to the conclusion that the wooden block is the most satisfactory material for paving their best streets and boulevards, then it seems strange that here in Portland and throughout the state, where wood is the greatest natural resource, we should import raw material for paving purposes.

"Just suppose that the roads and streets were paved with wood blocks, what it would mean to the lumber industry and the thousands of men engaged in it in various capacities? It would mean more money for everybody in the community, from the man who works in the forest to the owner of the sawmill and the accountants in the office or the man who drives the delivery truck or team. And it would stimulate interest in timber. But above all, it would give us durable pavements of the finest kind.

"A country road forty miles in length, with a hard surface pavement eighteen feet in width, would require about 9,000,000 feet of block lumber. The plan is to build seventy miles of hard surface roads. That would mean 18,000,000 feet of lumber. Sixteen million feet is a large quantity. It is more lumber, I believe, by a big margin, than all the mills in the Columbia River districts have now on their order books for foreign destinations, and if such an order was placed by an outside buyer the industry would feel very much encouraged.

"We look to other cities to buy our lumber. Eastern cities have recently placed contracts for long distances of wood block pavements, and they regard it as the most progressive step in the direction of civic improvement.

"The greatest part of the cost of the manufacture of lumber goes to the man who does the work, the man who works in the logging camp and the mill, and it is readily seen, therefore, that if wood blocks were used for these proposed roads it would really swell the payrolls of the city and the state.

"Then again, the work of laying the blocks would furnish employment for a veritable army. I believe that it is quite possible for the wood block to compete successfully with other high class materials, and as for lasting qualities, it will be far superior. Of that I am certain, for it has been proven in the large centers, where experiments have been carried on for many years."

ANGRY AT U. S.
SAN FRANCISCO TOY MERCHANT SAYS SALE OF MUNITIONS TO ALLIES DISLIKED BY TEUTONS. SEES NO STARVATION THERE.

LONDON, April 8.—(By mail to New York) —Wide-spread anger against the United States prevails everywhere in Germany. England is the object of intense hatred; France is pitied, and Russia is regarded as merely stupid and inferior, according to David Gradwohl of San Francisco. Gradwohl has just returned from a visit to Leipzig, Nuremberg, Nomsberg and Berlin as a buyer of toys.

The sale of ammunition by American firms to the allies has aroused a bitter feeling that has penetrated into every part of Germany, he said. There is no truth in the report that Germany is nearing starvation. Likewise stories that Germany has exhausted her draft of men of military age he declared to be inventions.
