MAY NOT ALLOW WOMEN TO FISH
 CONFLICTING LAWS PASSED BY LEGISLATURE—ONLY MEN CAN GET LICENSE, AND ONLY THE
 LICENSED CAN FISH

SALEM, April 22.—Women may be denied the right to fish and hunt in the state, according to the interpretation put here on two conflicting bills passed by the last legislature. Under the act passed and filed with the secretary of state February 10th, it is provided that it shall be unlawful for any male person to hunt and fish without a license, the intent of the measure evidently being to allow women the right to hunt and fish without a license. This section is re-enacted in the bill recognizing the fish and game commission, and filed February 24th, but the word "male" is eliminated, and it is provided that it shall be unlawful for any person to fish or hunt without a license.

In the section providing for the issuance of a license their issuance is restricted to males, and this latter act as a whole is construed as prohibiting all persons from fishing or hunting without license, and as barring women from obtaining a license. The discovery was made by an employe of the secretary of state, and the attorney general will be asked for an opinion on the law.

Sims Says French Army Is in Pink of Condition for Spring Campaign

This Statement Is Made After a Trip to the Front as Guest of France. Troops Are Eager for the Fray and Expect Victory

(By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMS)
 (United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, April 22.—The most important—probably the most decisive campaign of the great war—has begun strongly with the French army in the "pink of condition," and more effective by far than at the beginning last summer.

I have just returned from the front. Spring has come to the war zone. Dandelions carpet the green spaces between the earthworks and cluster about the holes made by German shells. The preliminary clashes of the great death struggle in northern France are being fought among a fairland of wild flowers.

By official invitation I made a trip to the French front, going northward as far as the British zone of operations. Before leaving the French headquarters, I was told I might see anything I wished.

"The French army has nothing to conceal from neutral eyes," said an officer at headquarters. With this permission to roam almost at will along the battle front, I was able to remain for a long time in the front trenches of the French army, both day and night.

Often at night I was within fifty feet of the Germans. It was the first time a foreign correspondent had been given such freedom of action and the first time a neutral had been enabled personally to observe the behavior of the French army under such conditions that there could not possibly have been any tiding or "fixing-up."

I saw the French army as it actually is and as it actually enters the third and probably the last phrase of the fighting. Of one thing I am certain—the world's opinion of Frenchmen is due for a revolutionary change. For there is a tremendous difference between the temperamental, red trousered soldiers—each man seemingly a big bundle of nerves, which the world saw march away last August, and the horizon-blue uniformed, grimly determined, muddy bulldogs whom I watched carefully potting Germans from the trenches in France and Flanders.

I saw nothing which struck home more forcefully. I never saw a more businesslike lot. They have re-automatized their lives. At war they go to the front like they used to go to work. While there, they work industriously, shooting with the same painstaking care a master mechanic observes at his lathe. When resting back of the line they laugh, sing or play musical instruments according to their temperament.

"The only trouble we have with our men comes on warm sunny days," an officer told me. They want to know why they can't attack, since all winter they have been promised action when the spring sunshine comes.

Both officers and men speak of peace as a long way off, unless unexpected developments bring an unexpected end to hostilities. But I saw no man who had the slightest doubt of an ultimate victory.

"Nobody believed last summer that the French soldiers would be able to fight this sort of a war," a French officer admitted. "He is running contrary to all fame and has broken all precedent. Nobody believed that the Frenchman possessed sufficient patience to remain in the trenches all winter. In short, France has won a moral victory over herself which assures victory over the enemy."

"The soldiers in the trenches actually are upholding their relatives at home for daring to become impatient. It is my duty to read soldiers' correspondences.

Marriages of women have increased over 15 per cent in the United States during the past 15 years.

pendence. You have my word of honor that out of 1,138 letters just submitted to me, every one was most cheerful."

From what I saw on this and on previous visits I am able to state that the French army was never in finer condition, physically and morally. I saw less evidence of typhoid and other diseases than one sees in bodies of men of the same size in time of peace. According to reports to headquarters which I saw, the army seems to have taken patience, stubbornness, thoroughness, dependability and the other best attributed and generally accredited to the Germans, as their own. When one considers, in addition, that every man is content and well fed, it is hard to see how they can be beaten.

DRINK HOT TEA FOR A BAD COLD

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Tee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus driving a cold from the system.

Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.
