What an American Sees on the Firing Line in Northern France

Staff Correspondent, With Sir John French's Army, Writes Unusual Series Regarding Conditions in the Field of the Latest Fighting

HEADQUARTERS OF THE BRITISH ARMY, NORTHERN FRANCE, April 23.—A week with the British army is divided in two parts. You spend the first part, if you are an American, learning that quietness and an absence of fuss doesn't mean inefficiency; you spend the second half in observing demonstrations of one hundred per cent efficiency. It is not only in the brilliant ends of war, like flying and fighting, that you see remarkable results attained—it is also in the common everyday affairs of maintaining the army and keeping it happy.

I can show you a young English officer who probably wears a monocle, whose stride is Piccadilly and who never loses his well bred expression of being bored, even while he is showing you over the great bathhouse and laundry which he started some few months ago. "Well here's the bag of tricks," he says, as he waves his riding stick across the entrance of the red brick building in a certain town. "You see there were an awful lot of our men who got no chance to bathe during the early part of the war. Some of them went three months without bathing. I've got two of their shirts nailed up in picture frames, which ought to be presented to the English museum. It is not the dirt so much as the little animals. Well, we took this jolly old place and turned it into a cleaning house—all would have been out of work if it had not have been for this jolly old cleaning house."

This young officer has done a man's sized job in this war with a lack of waste motion that ought to make him a good laundry proprietor in peace times, or a great soldier. The British army efficiency extends to psychology. In a town not a far distance from the bathhouse is "The Follies." It is a theater. If you are wondering why theaters are run in London in war time you have only to come here where the audience is made up nightly of 3,000 or more men who have been in the trenches face to face with death and are going back again, and you will see the cheering value of theatrical amusement.

The object of this theater is to make the soldier behind the trench line forget all about the war. It has exactly the same object as the remarkable new convalescent hospital in the war zone which are nothing more than "rest cures" for tired, nerve-strained men, and not hospitals for wounded or sick men. "The Follies" is a real theater in a fair-sized town. It's a soldier's show. The six men who make up the troupe were soldiers, excused from shooting and fighting just because they could sing and dance and make other soldiers forget themselves. There are two performances a night. The place is always packed and the British soldiers are happy and laughing. They don't go in companies, but in crowds or singly, as they please—as they would go to a show in London. The night I saw the "Follies" there were London officers around me who enjoyed the show as heartily, apparently, as if it had been given in a music hall in London. The song hit of the night was this:

"Hear the military bands a playing 'Rule Britannia and God save the King.' But for the fellows in the trenches, 'Thinking of their wenches There's one song only, When they're sad and lonely, And that's little Johnny Morgan,' On his old mouth organ, Playing 'Home, Sweet Home.'"

United Press Service
NEW BRITAIN, Conn., May 11.—To avenge the death of a brother in the sinking of the Lusitania, the Trumbull Brothers Manufacturing company has decided to produce and sell munitions of war to the allies. "In the past we refused such orders," said John Trumbull, "but as a result of the death of our brother we have determined to go into the business in the near future."

Geo. R. Hennig, factory representative of the Willys-Overland company, has been in town for several days, visiting W. T. Lee, the local dealer. Mr. Hennig is making a trip of the coast in order to size up the physical and financial conditions, and to select more distributors. "There has been an unusual demand for cars this season," said Mr. Hennig. "Our anticipated production of 75,000 cars for this season has been realized, and we plan to build 150,000 for next season. "The automobile industry is now the third largest in the world. There will be built this season more than half a million cars. While some new companies have sprung up, yet there are fewer each year. The auto business tends toward the survival of the fittest, and today five of the largest companies build 80 per cent of the new cars in use. Surely this increased business does not look like hard times."

BASEBALL BOYS TALK MANAGER

BELIEF IS THAT A. Y. TINDALL WILL GUIDE THE DESTINIES OF THE BALL CLUB—HAS HAD EXPERIENCE

It rained some Sunday. Also it rained some last night. And reports from the south indicate that it poured throughout Northern California. The local baseball players now believe that all the water in the skies has been poured out, and they look for good baseball weather hereafter. Accordingly, plans for a fast team and a good schedule of games goeth merrily on, the selecting of a manager being the big point right now. It is understood that A. Y. Tindall, owner of the Orpheus theater, will be the man for the Connie Mack job. Tindall is well liked by players, fans and ball club officials, and he has a good business head, as well as a knowledge of baseball. He managed semi-professional teams in California with great success.

Moving Pictures

Yes, Tillie has arrived. We mean "Tillie's Punctured Romance." This greatest of all comedies will be presented at the Star theater tonight and

"Punctured Romance" is made for laughing purposes only. Marie Dressler, the famous comedienne, supported by Mabel Normand and Chas. Chaplin, is the trio of famous comedy stars that are the cause of all the merriment that is to be found in this six reel comedy. Chaplin alone is a positive scream. Imagine his funny antics with such a capable support. The Peerless orchestra will be there with a fine program of popular music to suit the picture.

Owing to the washout at Kennett, the "Million Dollar Mystery" has not been received, and in its stead the Orpheus will show tonight "The Wishing Ring," a Shubert feature in five parts. "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be shown as soon as received.
