SHIPPINGTON IS A LIVELY BURG

CORRESPONDENT IS ON THE TRAIL OF STORY WHICH WILL MAKE 'EM ALL SIT UP AND TAKE NOTICE.

By LORA KING
SHIPPINGTON, May 21.—Mrs. John Caldwell of the Buenavista chicken ranch has 400 chickens at the present writing.

The Young hotel has all the boarders it can accommodate. Madame Yancy is the queen of the earth when it comes to culinary excellence. She ought to wear a crown of cookies, for her cookies—yum, yum.

We understand that preparations are being made for building more houses in Shippington this summer.

I promised the fore part of the week to give the Herald a good news item for Saturday, but it takes time to interview the Sphinx and I may not be able to drill clear through his shell until next week. Say, can anyone tell me what the riddle of the ancient Sphinx was? If you can, I will agree to tell you the riddle of the Klamath Falls Sphinx next week, and I'll further promise you it will be interesting reading—worth a dollar a line and warranted to make a mash at forty yards—and also proving that a newspaper correspondent can see as far into a millstone as can the miller himself.

Captain Wickstrom has just finished driving piling for a dock for the Calkins and Hamilton fleet. This dock is being built at the old Hanks landing, a few rods north of the Winema landing.

The new rock crusher is being built at the foot of the cliff at Hotel Park, near Winema landing, and will be ready the first of next week, it is understood.

John Linman has the hull of another fine launch nearly completed. When this is launched John may build a submarine, for if John says he will, he will.

Hall Caine's Masterpiece
Is the Bill at Orpheus

In the wonderful acting photoplay, "The Christian," which is being presented by the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., at the Orpheus tonight and tomorrow, one of the scenes reveals a reception at the home of Mrs. MacCrea, a wealthy woman, living on Fifth avenue, New York. Her daughter, Vera MacCrea, is a type of rich American girl, who becomes the victim of an ambitious mother. This situation is not especially novel, but as it is portrayed by Miss Jane Fearnley and Mr. Harry Northrup, it becomes a vivid lesson to those mothers who blindly try to force their young daughters into fashionable marriage. The story is painfully shown in the sadness of Vera's expression, while she is being wooed by Mr. Harry Northrup, as Lord Robert Ure.

The making of this film took eight months of continuous care and labor. Frederick Thompson (former stage director with David Belasco) has accomplished something that is beautiful in feeling, and in drama. The entire production has been under the personal supervision of Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, who declares that this is the greatest photoplay ever sent out by the Vitagraph company. So as to maintain the illusion, and inspire Hall Caine's exquisite story, the original music, which was used during the progress of the play, will be given during the film performance. It is safe to say that Mr. Eugene Mullin, who has made the scenario, has lost nothing of the flavor of Hall Caine's literary performance, nor has the camera ever achieved a more beautiful expression of emotional acting that will be seen in the photoplay of "The Christian."

Says Representative
Is a Dire Necessity

The following letter, written by John C. Hill, secretary of the Klamath Development company, has been sent to a number of Klamath Falls men of affairs:

"It seems to us that Klamath county is overlooking a great opportunity in failing to provide for the expense necessary to keep a man in charge of the county exhibits at the exposition. Thousands upon thousands of visitors are passing through the Oregon building, where the various counties of the state are explaining through their representatives the beauties and advantages of their particular location. When they come to the Klamath county exhibit they find plenty to arouse their interest, but no one to answer their inquiries. It is true that Mr. Oliver was here for a short time, and Mr. Fleet, secretary of your Chamber of Commerce, spent a few days here, but if Klamath county expects to get the benefit of the opportunity of a life time, she must wake up to the great necessity of keeping someone at the exposition who is well versed in the many advantages being offered by Klamath county to the man who has money to invest. This man should also be qualified to give stereopticon lectures in Sunset theater (Southern Pacific building). The Klamath Development company can furnish a number of slides for these lectures, and can also arrange with the Southern Pacific company for three or four lectures per week without any cost to Klamath county. We could also arrange to have Klamath folders given out by clerks in the Southern Pacific ticket office. In this way all the facts concerning Klamath county could be properly placed before a great multitude of people every month, some of whom would undoubtedly grasp the alluring opportunities offered.

"I hope you will see the necessity of immediate action in this matter, and that through your efforts in conjunction with those of the leading citizens and business concerns of Klamath county, the proper representative will be maintained at the exposition."

Clean-Up Wave
Good citizenship is good business, and good citizens are taking an active interest in the clean-up movement. The slogan of the city just now is "clean-up." There is not a line of business in town, or a citizen thereof, that will not benefit through a thorough cleansing of our city. It is a protection against the ravages of disease, as well as against fires.—Corona Courier.

The city council passed a new fire ordinance at its meeting Tuesday night. It embodies the provisions of the old ordinance and several amendments as to fire limits and extends the said limits in the depot district. It also strengthens the city's powers with reference to such fire-wrecked structures as the old opera house by enabling it to have them eliminated from the landscape.—Ashland Record.

YOUR CHILD

Dearest Public—
Say, Father, if you have a boy or girl who is smart enough to graduate from the high school you should be very proud, as they have manifested a disposition to be somebody.

This is their first achievement of merit, and should be rewarded with some lasting token.

I think I have something that will please the not too fastidious.

A ring, watch, bracelet, brooch, tie pin or La Valliere, are the things that will last, and they will look at them in after years and say, "Dad gave me this when I graduated."

Margurite Clark, who made her first appearance at the Star theater last night in "Wildflower," certainly captivated the audience. She is, without doubt, one of the cleverest little ladies that picture producers have so far introduced. Little Miss Clark, for little she is, even smaller in stature than Mary Pickford, possesses all of the necessary qualities which go to make a great and popular actress. She has exceptional talent, a rare type of beauty, and is capable of playing two distinctly different parts in a manner that is indeed surprising, when we saw her as the little wildflower roaming over the hills, in her bare feet, we thought it was impossible for her to successfully portray the part of the great lady in society, which comes later in the picture. But leave it to Miss Clark. She not only plays the part, but she plays it admirably, in a manner that will win the heart of any spectator. The story is an exceptionally good one, one that is particularly suited to Miss Clark. She is ably supported by Harold Lockwood, James Cooley, Jack Pickford and a large cast of the usual Famous Players standard. "Wildflower" will be presented tonight for the last time. Max Figman will be with us tomorrow, in "What's His Name."
