KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1915

AND STOP AT KLAMATH FALLS TO A COMMERCIAL CLUB

EIGHTEEN active business men and twenty-five women were present last night when the Klamath Chamber of Commerce meeting opened in Houtson's opera house. There was a considerable number of other men present, but eighteen was the total number of the active business men of this city.

People of Klamath Falls, stop and think! What does it mean? It means that there is a lethargy here that must be shaken off. A lethargy that is deep. A lethargy that is dangerous, and threatens the high throne of our very commonwealth.

We must awaken! The time is ripe for action and this abominable lethargy which is sapping our very life blood will starve this city of every vestige of the human milk of life, of love, of property; of that civic pride and happiness that comes only to a people when once they have awakened to the conditions about them—have awakened to the bare, bald facts which are staring them in the face, that must be confronted, surmounted and wrestled with until they are conquered and put behind honorable backs of disdain—put on the shelf, where they will forever remain.

The size of the body of people which was present last night was an insult to the officers of our Chamber of Commerce. It was an insult to the representatives of the United States federal court who had prevailed upon by the worthy president of the Chamber of Commerce, Dr. Johnson, to remain here an extra day to speak to the people. An insult to the pioneers of Oregon so ably represented by the Honorable Judge Webster, a pioneer of Oregon, and one of the ablest speakers within its confines. He, also, had prevailed upon to remain here an extra day to meet and speak with the people of Klamath Falls. The people who were present showed a deep rapping interest and patriotism, for there is patriotism in municipal affairs as well as in national. If we are to have national patriotism we must first have patriotism in our homes, our cities, our churches, our business and our civic organizations.

What is patriotism? It is that feeling of love, fidelity, pride and loyalty—first in our fellow man, and second our country. To have it in our nation we must first practice it at home, where every movement which ever does anything for the good of our state or for the good of our nation must originate.

Chagrin could be seen upon the face of every speaker of this city as he spoke last night at the fact that so many of the good, loyal, faithful and whole-hearted people of this city had overlooked the situation last night. Each one of the speakers from other communities complimented the people of this city on the exceptional treatment which they have received while here, but not one of them failed to realize, and could not help but mention it, intentionally or otherwise, the poor public spirit exhibited.

Nevertheless, the body of people that were present ought to realize the situation in this city. Each person could not help but see clearly the duty that lies before this city, as its problems, its past, and its future were all brought out so plainly and wholeheartedly—stated in plain facts. There was a large nucleus number present to form a nucleus about which, working as they are in their various organizations, to bring about the desired results, which will only be obtained by co-operation between every individual organization in the city that has as its underlying principle the welfare of the home, the business and the city.

The Chamber of Commerce is not ashamed nor disheartened. A spirit of fight for the common good is coursing in the veins of the officers, and they are going to open a way for this end with a unified purpose—a Commercial Club. A committee from the Chamber of Commerce has started to work, and will call upon every business man and every citizen who may be reached, and so far as we are able, it is our duty to give them every possible support—not in a half-hearted way, but with an enthusiasm that will bring results. Success to the Commercial Club.

HOW ABOUT IT, MEN?

THE MEN are howling because "mere" women are usurping their places. Many look with disdain on their efforts, and refuse to take them very seriously. Others think it a good joke. Others take it seriously, and look on with fear. Still others see it and think it proper.

It was but two days ago that one of the largest railroads in the Pacific Northwest announced publicly that two women were to be established as ticket agents in their main offices in the cities of Portland and Seattle. Metropolitan papers gave the facts a column of space in black and white, with pictures of the women that would have filled nearly another column. It has been heralded as the first time in the history of the country that such positions have been opened to women.

How about it, men? How does it look? There might be something in all this "rot" after all. The men of Oregon are far and above the men of most of the United States because they voted to give the women equal suffrage. They have shown foresight. Conditions were such that it was almost an absolute necessity that the women be given their vote.

But are we going to allow the women to run our civic affairs, too? Are we going to let them run our Chamber of Commerce? Are we going to let them out us completely? There was a larger number of women present last night than business men at the big boost meeting held by the Chamber of Commerce.

What is to become of "mere" man? Is he to be relegated to the scrap heap—put under the sink with the rest of the pipes—put away on the shelf for keeps? If they run our civic affairs, our railroads and a few more of our "man-made" organizations, I guess we might as well give up hope, and die a nice, natural, peaceful sort of a death, with soft music and flowers to hide our shame.

The women of Klamath Falls are showing enterprise and a spirit of "get-up" that will do wonders when properly directed and organized. The men's organizations will be the auxiliaries and the women will do the things that count. If the women of this city would only realize it, they are the making of this city into a city that will be a beauty spot on the face of the earth—a spot of not only verdure of God's "green grass, mighty trees and wonderful scenic effects, but will make of it a spot with the verdure of happiness, of self-content, self-pride and civic pride that will so far surpass any other city in the state of Oregon that, in the years to come, will not be outshone by any metropolises in the Pacific Coast.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

"Chautauqua" by ELDER S. D. MARLAN, Pastor Christian Church

Luke 19:10—"I came to seek and save that which was lost."

The second Chautauqua program given in Klamath Falls is a matter of history. Some three years ago the pioneer Chautauqua committee made possible the first entertainment of this kind, and we are told it was a good one, too. Last September 50 people, residents of our city, made a contract with the Ellison White Chautauqua system for a six days' program. This was given July 9-14, and from this great event we wish to draw some lessons for our sermon today.

It was on the banks of Chautauqua Lake, in Western New York, in 1847, that Lewis Miller and Bishop J. H. Vincent fathered the institution known as Chautauqua for the purpose of Bible study, training Bible school teachers, and to promote a daily reading course. In later years lectures, concerts and entertainments have been added, until we have the Chautauqua as it is today. Two definitions for the word Chautauqua have been given. First, "a sack tied in the middle," taken from the peculiar shape of the body of water by this name. Second, "where the child was lost," taken from the story that a child was at one time drowned in the lake, and the body never found. Our text is chosen with the last mentioned meaning of the word in mind.

As Christ came to save those who were out of relationship with the Father, so we believe Chautauqua is a heaven born messenger going up and down our land, seeking out and redeeming individuals, towns and communities, and awakening them to their great responsibilities and possibilities. Chautauqua, as all great and lasting institutions, had a small Chautauqua. We call to mind a small Chau-

GIRLS' CLUB GOES CAMPING

EIGHT GIRLS COMPRISING SINI HOMINI CLUB ARE CAMPING ON UPPER KLAMATH LAKE WITH CHAPERONES

Eight Klamath Falls young ladies who compose the membership of the "Sini Homini" club have left the confines of the city for the beauty spots, the deep running rivers, the home of the wily trout and the verdure of the forests about Upper Klamath lake.

The members of the club are: Miss Ina Graham, Miss Margery Dezell, Miss Clara Calkins, Miss Neva Faught, Miss Claudia Spink, Miss Margaret Worden, Miss Pearl Leavitt and Miss Myrtle Leavitt. The chaperons are: Mrs. McCarthy and Mrs. Rose Reed.

The party has taken a complete camping outfit and are prepared to spend two weeks. They are located near Short Creek on Pelican Bay, between Harriman Lodge and Rocky Point.

The Studebaker company will build a branch at Portland, to cost $90,000.
