KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON TUESDAY, JULY 6, 1915

KLAMATH'S OPPORTUNITIES

KLAMATH'S opportunities this summer in having our congressmen, governor, members of the state fish and game commission, capitalists and the visitors that are planning to come to this country are great. The visit here at this time of Representative N. J. Sinnott of this district is an important one.

Mr. Sinnott is here on business. As a matter of fact, most of the visits paid here during the past month by these officials have been visits on business purely. They are here looking over our country, our projects, our possibilities, and when they leave they will prophesy our future to their business associates and their various constituencies.

Some good work has been done during their visits, yet it must be kept up to get the results. For instance, the Ankeny canal matter was brought to the attention of Senator Chamberlain. He made a special trip to the canal to view it. He has promised his aid in helping the government and this city to get rid of the nuisance. But we have to do the work. His proposition was this: The people of this city who are interested must secure expert legal advice on the proposition of doing away with the canal. The water rights under the canal must be disposed of in some legal manner. Working under legal advice, a plan must be formulated and forwarded to him in such shape so that he can formulate it into a bill to present to congress.

Project Manager J. G. Camp of the Klamath Project states that he will be glad to forward any matter to the department which may be presented to him in an effort to untangle the affair and straighten it out, and that he will co-operate in disposition of the matter. But Mr. Camp cannot be expected to give up his time and work on the proposition any longer. He worked as hard as possible for a year in an endeavor to rid the city of this menace, and then the plan evolved was turned down by the people of the city. Today there is as little water being run through the canal as possible, according to Mr. Camp, to keep down any damage that might occur from the canal.

It is an unsightly affair at the best, and in the past has been the cause of an unhealthy condition in this city. The only thing that saves us at this time is the altitude of this city and the pure air currents that we have on account of it. The Ankeny canal proposition ought to be settled as soon as possible if for no other reason now than that we have started to close it. But further than this, there are other reasons. This city will not always be as healthy, and at any time the canal may prove a menace, as it has in past years. It is a menace now.

The advice of Senator Chamberlain is of the best, and will undoubtedly be taken up. Representative Sinnott is here, and should be made fully cognizant of the proposition, so that when the time comes he will be able to support us and work with us, knowing the facts as they are.

Scattered Shots

A FARMER stated today that this rain is going to ruin the wheat crop, and is going to make it so large that they will have to harvest it. If it had not rained they would not have been bothered with it.

PRINEVILLE'S ball team took an awful spill yesterday. But we have to give them credit for good, clean sportsmanship all the way through.

BUT WE are perfectly satisfied that the local team can beat them any place or any time.

OWING TO the proximity of the rabies on three sides of our country, and the hot weather coming, it would be the wise and judicial thing to muzzle all the dogs in the city.

FORT KLAMATH is holding her Fourth this week, giving way last week for us.

THERE ARE rumors of a woman candidate in the mayoralty field. If she is going to play fair politics she ought to come out and not try to pull any of that old dark horse stuff.

THERE IS one thing sure. That certain of the candidates are out after that office.

THE CITY council is considering muzzling all dogs that run loose. It would greatly simplify matters when it comes to picking up the strays.

THERE ARE lots of dogs that are let live simply because nobody has the heart to kill them, despite their being a menace.

WELL, THE celebration is all over now—or should be. We can settle down once more and get to work—or should.

ENGLISH LEADER SAYS LAST WAR UPHOLDS GERMAN SOCIALIST STATEMENT OF FEW DAYS AGO IN SPECIAL INTERVIEW FOR UNITED PRESS

By ED L. KEEN (United Press Staff Correspondent) (Copyright, 1915, by United Press)

LONDON, July 5.—"I welcome whole heartedly the German socialists manifesto calling upon the workers of other belligerents to use their endeavors for peace."

This was the statement of Ramsay MacDonald, noted labor leader of England, in an interview with the United Press today.

"It is only the beginning, and must be regarded as such," MacDonald added. "I regret that the manifesto deals so much with the past, because we are not quite in the temper to discuss that just yet. At the same time I think it is the duty of the working classes of other belligerents to respond to this manifesto and state the conditions under which they are prepared to support peace propoganda."

McDonald is the leader of the independent labor party, the powerful socialist wing of the British labor movement.

"The people of Great Britain responded to the call of Belgium for aid, and while so doing made up their minds this would be the last European war," he declared, in taking up the detailed discussion of the German manifesto.

"They are now told they should decide to listen to no peace talk until Belgium has been further devastated by being fought over, and until Germany is brought to her knees. If these things were necessary to secure the ends for which our people entered the war, I would say nothing against them, however horrible they might be. But if we are still trying to reach our original goal, and have not been turned aside by impulses of mere militarism, I think it is our duty, as well as to our interest, to accept what we desire, provided we can really get it, at whatever stage of the military operations it may be.

"The military operations are not the ends themselves, but at best only the means to the end. After the time comes when we can get what we want through negotiations every life that is sacrificed is criminal.

"The problem is how the people of the various countries can get in touch with each other and make their desires and hopes understood to each other, and how from that knowledge and understanding they can come to settlement, which will secure them against domestic militarism or foreign attack."

Morgan's Assailant Carried Explosives

GLENCOVE, L. I., July 6.—Declaring J. Pierpont Morgan, head of the great American banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., was responsible for the continuation of Europe's war, a man believed to be insane, shot the financier at his home in this city last Saturday.

The police declared that the man had brought to the Morgan estate, besides two revolvers, a satchel containing six sticks of dynamite, a bottle of nitroglycerine and several fuming caps. The prisoner arrived in Mineola on the 8:30 train. He approached M. F. Ford, a taxicab driver, saying: "I want to be driven to the residence of J. P. Morgan. I want you to take me there quick, for I am in a big hurry."

He was well dressed, and Ford's suspicions were in no way aroused. The stranger got into the taxicab and started reading a newspaper.

Ford said the man showed no symptoms of nervousness. The distance to the Morgan home was quickly covered. When the place was reached the stranger got out, paid his fare, and remarked: "This is the man who is responsible for the European war," at the same time pointing to the mansion.

The chauffeur believed from the man's appearance that he was a business acquaintance, and thought nothing of the remark.

Passing up the driveway the visitor rang the bell. It was answered by the butler.

"I wish to see Mr. Morgan at once," he said. "It is of the utmost importance."

"Mr. Morgan regrets he cannot see you," replied the butler. "He is very busy."

This aroused the stranger's anger. "He won't see me?" he snarled. Drawing a 38-calibre revolver from his pocket, he said:

"He will see me. He is responsible for the war, and it has got to stop. He is the one man who can stop it."

The butler gave a shout of fear and Morgan, who was eating breakfast, hurried out to ascertain the cause.

As Morgan appeared the butler, mastering his fear, grappled with the stranger, who was shouting:

"I cannot help it. I must see Mr. Morgan. This war has got to stop. It has gone too far. I have come here to serve my country."

In the scuffle which followed the weapon was dropped, but the stranger breaking the butler's grip, drew a weapon of 32-calibre.

"You must help my country," he shouted to the financier, who had stopped short at the sight of the revolver.

Before Morgan could say anything the man began to fire. One bullet struck Morgan in the leg, making a flesh wound, and the other hit him in the side. The financier retained his presence of mind and started for his assailant. The shots aroused the household and servants came rushing to the scene from all directions. Even the maids aided in overpowering the assassin, and the butler picked up a heavy brass coal hod and hurled it at the stranger, striking him in the forehead and knocking him down.

Meantime Morgan, not knowing how badly he was hurt, staggered into a chair and collapsed. Servants instantly started telephoning for physicians and the police. Others were caring for the financier and still others were trussing up his assailant.

SCHOOL BANKS POPULAR IN CALIF.

$110,000 ARE IN THESE BANKS IN THE STATE—CULTIVATES A HABIT OF THRIFT IN THE SCHOOL CHILDREN

SACRAMENTO, July 6.—School saving banks are coming rapidly to the front in California. Latest reports show that more than $110,000 has been placed in such banks by elementary school pupils. In half a dozen cities the school savings bank idea has taken a strong hold, and many others are contemplating putting the system into practice. Interesting data has been collected by E. R. Snyder of the state board of education.

Oakland leads the movement with 5,500 pupils holding accounts that aggregate more than $90,000. The plan has been in vogue there for five years. Alameda, with 1,200 pupils, who have deposited nearly $6,000, and Berkeley with 1,700 young depositors and $6,000 in the school savings bank are next in line. In Long Beach 1,000 pupils have deposited $3,800.

In Sacramento the movement is still young, but growing substantially. After one year's operation two schools that took the lead in the movement have about $500 in the school savings banks.

The children of Sacramento have a novel idea, linking the school gardens with the school savings bank. The youngsters cultivate school gardens on vacant lots plowed up under the direction of the board of education. Each child has his little garden. When the vegetables are ready for market the children sell them to their parents or neighbors, who pass up the hucksters for a few days. It's only a few dollars for the boys and girls, but, bang, it goes into the school savings bank.

The banks are organized through co-operation with a big savings bank, which issues account books and pays interest. As the youngsters see their bank accounts grow they save their pennies which otherwise would be spent for candy and ice cream.

Bounding Up Orozco EL PASO, Tex., July 5.—A general round-up has been started since the disappearance of Orozco, and it is believed that he has jumped $7,500 bond and has left for Mexico.

Huerta has been re-arrested on a new charge of violating the neutrality of the United States, and has been brought here from San Antonio. It is reported that Huerta has received $60,000 from New York capitalists.

HOLT WAS A GERMAN PROF.

IDENTITY IS ESTABLISHED—HE WAS A QUIET MAN, AND BUT LITTLE KNOWN BEFORE HE WENT TO CORNELL

ITHICA, N. Y., July 6.—Records of Cornell university show that F. Holt was a member of the faculty here from 1909 to 1911.

Holt left at the end of the last term, and was understood to have accepted an engagement to teach in Dallas, Texas the next year. He was said to be of German descent, but a native of America. Holt spoke with a German accent. He is married, and his wife is understood to have preceded him to Texas. The Holt known here is about 33 years of age.

University officials said they knew little regarding Holt before he came to Cornell as an instructor. They said he had been at Cornell only one year. He was of a quiet disposition, and made few friends. He left here eight or ten days ago.

WORK AT TULE LAKE IS CLOSED

OWING TO SHORTAGE OF MONEY IN FUND CREW HAS BEEN PULLED OFF—FIND LAVA RUNS DEEP—START IN FALL

The crew of men which Project Manager J. G. Camp had working on the Tule Lake project for draining the lake through an outlet in the bottom has been withdrawn on account of a shortage of funds due to the end of the fiscal year, which closed July 1st, according to Mr. Camp.

The crew, he states, found that the lava formation opposite the Stronghold runs nearly as deep as the bed of the lake, which precludes much possibility of finding an opening there.

However, it is hoped that another crew may be placed to work late this summer or this fall under a new appropriation, which will further investigate the problem of draining Tule Lake, which will mean the reclaiming of thousands of acres of the choicest farming land known.
