The colliers have been profiting hugely from the war.

Liberty Bell Passes Tonight

United Press Service PORTLAND, July 15.—The Liberty Bell arrived at 7 o'clock this morning, and was switched off on the street opposite the court house, where throngs viewed the historic relic, marching by for five hours this morning. Thousands of children marched in a huge parade. The bell stops at Salem this afternoon, and will proceed south.

The Liberty Bell will pass through Ashland near the hour of midnight tonight, and the people of that city have planned a great celebration for its short visit, the last in Oregon before it goes on to California.

The bell has been feted and honored by thousands upon thousands of Americans from the time it left Philadelphia until now, and it will continue so throughout its trip. Today it was in Portland from 6 a. m. until 12 o'clock noon. It arrived at Salem at 2 and left at 2:30; it will arrive at Eugene at 5 p. m., and leave at 5:15; Cottage Grove, 5:55 to 6; Roseburg, 6:15 to 8:30, reaching Ashland about 12 o'clock tonight.

For the eighth time since it was hung in Independence Hall, the Liberty bell was taken from its home on July 5th, and started on the cross-continental trip to San Francisco, there to form the principal exhibit in the Panama-Pacific exposition. Noted metallurgical engineers have decided that the bell is liable to return in pieces, but councils and the mayor had answered that patriotic duty to the citizens of the West demanded that the relic should go, and it is going. Precautions unique in the history of the bell trip are being taken, and the bell is being more carefully cared for than on any of its former trips to expositions in the East and South.
