KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON TUESDAY, JULY 27, 1915

KLAMATH'S OPPORTUNITY

FROM the excellent spirit prevailing throughout the evening and the enthusiasm manifested during the speaking, it is evident that everyone of the hundred or more guests at the "Get Together" dinner at the White Pelican last night, must have felt that Klamath Falls is a pretty good place to do business in, but that it may be made a much better place for commercial and industrial activity. Each must also have felt more strongly than ever before that here is a good place for a home, and can be made a much more desirable place in which to live.

The splendid, thoughtful addresses must have caused each listener to feel, however, that he has not quite measured up to what was there shown to be his individual responsibility as a citizen of Klamath Falls, and experienced a desire and a resolve to come up nearer to the pattern of citizenship set before him.

In that atmosphere of deep sincerity and earnestness, each of us certainly caught something of the loyalty, enthusiasm and determination that was so prevalent. Each could not but feel a thrill of pleasure at the opportunity afforded for doing something for OUR CITY, Klamath Falls, and our country.

We are led to realize that we have not heretofore appreciated the fact that Klamath Falls is OUR CITY. And with this we must each have felt that it rests with us individually to say whether we are willing to get together as a unit and so organize that we can make this, OUR CITY, grow to become the city we want it to be, and of which we shall all be proud.

And that we are accountable for what Klamath Falls, is, and will be responsible for what it is to be in the future, whether we wish to be or not. It was made very clear that we cannot escape this, and the sooner we accept this the better for Klamath Falls and for each of us living here.

We go about our affairs as though we think that in doing business uprightly we thereby made good citizens.

But are we? That is but a portion of the obligations of real citizenship.

We act as though we believe we know all about OUR CITY, and its needs and how they should be met; and that all others also know. We don't, and they don't. The question is squarely up to us—what are we going to do about it? Are we going to drift along with the usual indifference as to what OUR CITY is and may be? Are we going to pass up the best opportunity that we have ever had to effectively promote the interests of Klamath Falls and the splendid resources of Klamath county? Are we going to continue in the old way of everybody for himself, a policy which has been such a great barrier to our progress? Or will we really get together in the New Commercial Club, stay together and pull together? Last night's dinner opened the portals and pointed the way to get together for systematic and effective endeavor for progress.

Let us heed the call, follow the course indicated and GET SOMEWHERE.

NEWSPAPER EDS COME INTO OWN

ALL SORTS OF EVENTS STAGED FOR BENEFIT OF EDITORS AND PUBLISHERS AT THE P. P. L. EXPOSITION

United Press Service SAN FRANCISCO, July 27—Newspapermen ruled the Panama-Pacific exposition today.

Editors and publishers joined hands with office boys today in celebrating Newspapermen's day at the fair.

Ten Indians from Glacier National Park provided war dances and songs for the journalists.

The day opened with a "press caravan" on Market street, which included characters taken from the comic supplement clowns in their dominoes and beautifully decorated floats representing newspapers in different parts of California. "The Battle of the Marina" was the second event of the day. This took place at 2 o'clock and included the participation of Art Smith and other aviators for the first time in the United States or Europe, a sensational sky duel between aeroplanes.

The third big event was the try-out athletics contests to qualify for the Far Western championships to be held at the exposition later in the summer. A "Venetian Night Water Carnival" closed the day's celebration.

Oregon Ranks Fourth in the Lumber Industry

According to the government figures for 1913, Oregon ranks fourth in the list of lumber producing states, having advanced from twenty-third place in the past decade.

According to the 1913 figures Washington still ranks first in lumber production. In fact, the reported production in this state for 1913, approximately 4,600,000,000 feet, was the largest ever reported for that or other state. Michigan approached this figure in 1890 by reporting a production of 4,311,000,000.

The cut of Douglas fir in 1913 was the largest ever reported for this species, being over 5,500,000,000 feet. This figure is for a single species. The cut of yellow pine for 1913 was reported as nearly 15,000,000,000 feet, which figure was second only to that reported in 1909. The latter figure is made up of all species commercially known as yellow pine.

Out of a population of approximately 675,000 people in Oregon, 84,000, or one-sixth of the total number, is directly dependent upon the lumber industry. Of a population of 1,142,000 people in Washington, 16 per cent, or approximately 193,000, are dependent upon the lumber industry.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY United Press Service. DULUTH, Minn., July 27.—Charles French has no job with Uncle Sam's navy today, just because Uncle Sam could not use a piano tuner. He sought entrance here as a piano tuner, but the recruiting officer could not find any such vacancy, and he told French to come back again.

WOMEN ARE NOT NATURALLY BETTER

HAVE BEEN AND ARE, PERHAPS, BUT NOT INHERENTLY SO, IS BELIEVED BY PROFESSOR T. W. SHANNON

United Press Service SAN FRANCISCO, July 27—"That women have been and are better by practice than men, I cheerfully admit; that they are inherently better than men, I positively deny."

So declared Professor T. W. Shannon of Delaware, Ohio, editor of the Practical Eugenics, in an address on Children can't eat too much ICE CREAM—their craving for it is perfectly natural—it's nature's own food.

It's a tissue builder. Its food qualities build more strength than most of the food we now eat. That's just why you should give plenty of it to the "kiddies"—they need it—it's the best thing for them.

What's good for the children is good for the "grown-ups" as well. Why not have it every night as a dessert?

Order it today and every day for the children. See that it comes from us. Ours is a Tissue Building, Pure Food Ice Cream.

"Did God Make Women to Be Morally Superior to Men?" before the Ninth International Purity Congress here recently.

"There is nothing in revelation, nothing in nature, nothing in human experience, and nothing in human philosophy that proves that women are inherently more moral than men. The Bible does not teach or recognize that there is any moral difference between men and women. It condemns sin in one as severely as in the other. The same moral obedience is required and that attainments of character are offered to one as to the other," said Professor Shannon.

"If there is no moral differences in their inherent natures, why is it that women live so much more consistently than do men? To this question there can be but one correct answer. A perverted public sentiment tolerates, encourages and fosters the inconsistencies of profanity, tobacco, alcohol, and vice in men and condemns these habits and sins when indulged in by women."

Professor Shannon appeared for a single standard of morals.
