CITY DADS TALK WELFARE OF CITY

MUCH SMALL BUSINESS TRANSACTED—ORDINANCES AND GENERAL CIVIC CONDITIONS ARE DISCUSSED

A number of important matters were brought up before the city council last night for discussion, including the conditions of the streets in the city, civic improvements that might be made by the council, and the making of new and bringing up to date of old ordinances. Several permits and an ordinance for the city official paper were granted and passed.

The streets under discussion were Sixth, Ninth, Third and Main streets particularly, and the condition of the paving as it now is, it developing that these streets all need attention. No action was taken.

Councilman Miller announced that his part of the city is going to do some improvement work on their streets and on the road leading from the Big Basin mill to the bridge across the irrigation canal by working and rolling the roads and providing drainage for the streets. He suggested that the others could do some good work about the city by seeing that their residence district streets were put into good shape.

Councilman Doty suggested that an ordinance be made providing for the punishment of boys or others breaking windows and destroying property about the city. The situation was discussed and brought to light that the city already has an ordinance, but that residents near such places were negligent in informing the police as to the perpetrators.

An ordinance providing that the Evening Herald be the official newspaper for the city passed its final reading by a unanimous vote, to hold for one year, from June 1, 1915. A new ordinance providing for the payment of an electrical inspector on the fee system was introduced by Councilman Sheets, and passed to its second reading. A general discussion of the state of the city's ordinances and the steps that ought to be taken for bringing them up-to-date was discussed. A plumbing ordinance was also discussed. An ordinance allowing for the purchase of a team of horses passed to its third reading. An ordinance giving the contract for the steel work to the Baldwin Hardware company, as submitted by bid, was passed.

The resignation of John Pugh as Patrolman No. 3 was received and accepted. Oliver Dews was appointed in his place.

The following permits were granted: To I. J. Prather for the erection of a small hen house at his residence on High street; to Geo. W. White for the placing of an electric sign in front of the Keller cafe; to E. P. Bittinger for the erection of a wagon shed in the rear of the Superior Laundry building; to Mrs. Grace Mason for the repair of a building at the corner of Main and Seventh streets. The saloon license of McDonald & Hunsaker, to be known as the Federal Liquor Company, was extended until January 1, 1916.

A complaint was received from Mrs. Robert Alexander, stating that it is impossible to make sewer connections on lots 3 and 3, block 54, on Esplanade street, but that the property had been assessed. The city engineer was ordered to report the situation at the next meeting.

run, a guess having to be made at the ward.

On arriving the entire building was practically afire from the rear to the front. The opening of the front doors forced the draft back and drove the flames upward, and saved a large portion of the front of the building. The seats, however, were all scorched and burned to the front of the building. Fire had entered the operator's room, destroyed five films in their racks, broke some of the lenses in the machine and badly scorched the machine. The rear end of the building, including the stage, orchestra pit, a piano and organ, several musical instruments and other articles were totally destroyed.

Manager Tindall states that on July 2 he dropped $1,000 fire insurance, on account of the high rate, not fearing any danger. The chairs in the house were not all paid for, and he states that the $1,000 insurance which he carried will about clean up all the debts on the business. His property he estimates at $3,000. Practically the only things saved were his bass horn, badly scorched, and the picture machine with broken lenses and also scorched. The seats were all ruined, as were all furnishings in the building.

The cause of the fire is a mystery, but there is a strong suspicion of incendiarism or carelessness. Tindall states that the wiring in the building was of the best and the wires were carried through conduits. Besides all connections were off when he left the theater about 10 o'clock and he as well as others, believe that there is little possibility of fire from this cause. The fact that access to the theater could be obtained through a side door which could not be locked, and also through a rear door under the stage offers a clue to other theories. Tindall states that he once found two empty beer bottles on the stage which somebody had evidently left after being in the theater. A drunk might have been sleeping there and set the fire by dropping a cigarette.

A man was heard to say in the Rex cafe following the fire early this morning that he had "sopped" near or under the building, and had been awakened by the people and noise after the fire had gained a good headway, and that he had then moved his bed. Some campers were located near the rear of the building, and were not awakened until the fire had made good headway.

The evidence on the inside of the building show that the fire probably started on the stage or in the orchestra pit, and evidently had smoldered and burned fiercely inside before breaking through and attracting attention. The front seats and half way back were burned completely, while the others were burned and charred clear to the rear, gradually less and less, it being believed that the fire, being practically all inside, forced the flames back, finally entering the operating room, until the roof in the rear was burned through and the front opened up, indicating that the fire started some time before it broke through. The exterior of the building in the rear was practically intact until the walls fell in, setting aside the theory that the fire started from the outside.

The building is owned by Major Worden, who is not in the city. It is not believed that he carried insurance.

ance. His loss is placed at from $1,500 to $2,000.

Tindall states that someone took one of the lenses out of his machine, probably while it was standing on the street after being removed. He states that it can be seen that it was screwed out, and that it was in when he carried the machine out of the building.

Men Are United for Good Work

been called for the purpose of presenting to you a plan for the reorganization of our Commercial Club, to make it more effective, to create system and efficiency. Now, in order to accomplish this requires that we put our shoulders to the wheel and furnish the capital to maintain an organization that will bring results according to the plan outlined to us by our board of directors. I have carefully studied this new plan; it exactly expresses my sentiments and meets with my hearty approval. With an organization as outlined we can accomplish anything we go after. I believe that we can, under this new system put in operation a number of plants now idle.

"You all realize that under our old system it was an everlasting battle to obtain funds to maintain the organization. The new plan does away with this. The money will be in the treasury and will give the directors an opportunity to use it when the time arrives to accomplish a purpose. Speaking for our own institution, I will recommend to our board of directors an increased subscription to the extent of at least one membership to every man employed by the bank; and I urge you all to be liberal in furnishing financial assistance, which perforce is the life of the organization. I believe in Klamath; do you?"

Klamath Needs

H. Van Rensselaer Chase, president of the city development bureau of San Francisco, was the next speaker, and delivered a spirited and inspiring address upon the needs of Klamath Falls and all this section in the way of organization and what should be undertaken. He spoke of the growth of the organization idea, leading up to the present form of a workable and working business organization to handle the big business of caring for the leading interests of the community.

He emphasized the necessity of getting away from the idea of developing a community by the distribution of flowery literature, and confining the publicity work to the use of facts and figures touching resources and conditions.

"The requirements in successful commercial organization work are men, money, methods, management," said he, "and the first of these and most important is men." He then cited the accomplishments of men in building communities against what seemed to be unsurmountable obstacles. If Klamath Falls does not accomplish all that should be accomplished for the development and the growth of the community, no one can be blamed but the people themselves. An organization such as should be found in such a community, and which the attendance here and the spirit shown indicates you are going to have, can do all right things which it sets out to do. If it does not, the directors and officers cannot be blamed. It is the people, the members of the organization, who make it what it is, and do what is to be done. The difficulty is that too many get

"tire trouble" and loaf on the job, stopping the procession."

The speaker then explained in detail the chart exhibited on the wall to show graphically the plan of operation of the new organization. It impressed all as being a splendid method of getting effective work for the community from the membership.

"Gospel Truth"

"Every word of the requirements for community work spoken by Mr. Chase is gospel truth, and I fully endorse all he said," is the way Charles W. Eberlein began his remarks when called upon by President Johnson for a statement on the traffic situation. Mr. Eberlein said that Klamath Falls, according to a well recognized natural law is placed where a great city must be placed where a great city must be the incubus of inadequate transportation facilities is removed. There is also a natural law of co-operation, which also brings results just as certain as any other cause and effect are correlated. Centering activities and the forces of the city in a strong organization is the only way to get results. The whole county is going to rally to the program which is planned, and the force of numbers will be such a power that what is wanted will be brought about."

Thanking those who had contributed so much to making the "get-together" meeting the great success that it was, President Johnson declared the meeting closed and the forward march begun.

The following were present:

"AUTO THIEF" STILL CAPERS

SIMILAR STUNT PULLED IN MERRILL—CAR NOW HIDDEN—GIBSON AND MASSE HAVE NOT SETTLED TROUBLE

The recent noon-day stunt of stealing an automobile pulled by a man by the name of Masse of Baker was repeated in Merrill yesterday, whether by request or not has not been stated. He made away with the machine here one day last week, claiming that Chas. Gibson, his partner in the machine, was attempting to buy him out of it.

He placed it in a garage here for safe keeping until it could be settled, but Gibson took possession, according to Lloyd Low, deputy sheriff. He left for Merrill, followed by Masse. Masse then Masse has again played the sleuth, slipped into the car, and came to Klamath Falls.

Low says he was ordered to see the auto thief from Merrill, but keeping the situation, did not interfere. He states that Masse has the car hidden now, and Gibson cannot find it. Both Masse and Gibson are in the city.
