DRINK HOT TEA FOR A BAD COOLD

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Tee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teaspoon full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus driving a cold from the system.

Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

RUB BACKACHE AND LUMBAGO RIGHT OUT

Rub Pain and Stiffness away with a small bottle of old honest St. Jacobs Oil

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a 25 cent bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right into the pain or ache, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the ache and pain right out of your back and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica and lame back misery so promptly!

England's Lethargy Is Protested by the French

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Aug. 6.—(By mail)—Every body in France knows it, so why keep it a secret: France is not at all satisfied with what England has done and is doing in this war, and Englishmen in France, soldiers as well as sojourners, admit France is right.

And now some stories by private conveyance from Great Britain that London is being fortified with a couple of rows of defenses running entirely around the city; that the English are saying "one never can tell what will happen"; that they admit lack of ammunition and will continue to lack it even under the best possible conditions for some months to come; that if the Germans make a dash for Calais and the other channel ports with forces such as she is using around Warsaw, there will be no stopping them at present.

What do all these stories mean? The French are asking. What is the matter with England after more than a year of war? Why can't she, with all her steel mills and kindred works, turn out much more than sufficient ammunition, enough, in fact, to supply her allies?

"Strikes have hampered us," Englishmen in France give as an excuse for many of these questions.

"Why tolerate strikes?" the French ask impatiently, "when the life of England hangs in the balance, with our own and that of several other countries perhaps as well?"

Now, with fall almost at hand, England is still holding, with great effort at that, her little thirty miles of front. The French hold 500 miles. In the eleven months of trench fighting this proportion has not changed, and many has been the time when French artillery has been called upon to support the British, even along their short front.

Gabriel Hanotaux, former minister of foreign affairs, a historian and unusually calm thinker, has said:

"From England there have come illusory catchwords on which we have lived for months, and which after benefitting us for a moment, have ended by doing us harm. . . . Was it not Lord Kitchener who evolved that formula so pregnant with hope but so tardy in delivery: 'Our forces will continue to expand unceasingly, while those of the enemy will unceasingly diminish.'"

Hanotaux did not express this criticism of England in private, or behind England's back. He said it in print, to England's face. Nor is that all he said. "The English ministers were prodigal of magnificent phrases," he writes, "but their workshops were idle."

I asked an Englishman while England still held only her thirty mile front, why Kitchener's promise of more and more and still more soldiers has not been made good. His reply, in effect, was that Kitchener himself had made good his promise. He had raised the soldiers.

"There are 3,000,000 soldiers or thereabouts in England," he said. "But they are equipped with WOODEN GUNS!"

So admitted my English friend. "There are men a-plenty," he went on, "but they lack the necessary equipment. They have uniforms, or most of them have, but many lack belts, knapsacks and the like. And of the thousands and thousands of recruits one sees drilling around London daily, very few have rifles. They are using the sticks used before the war in Ulster with other imitations made since."

The French wholeheartedly admit that England furnished the broom which was largely instrumental in sweeping German ships and German commerce from the seas.

"But French ships have not been idle, either," they declare. "We have kept the Austrian fleet cooped up all winter, and we have done all we could with the fleet in other directions. All we ask, 'Has England, like ourselves, done ALL she is able to do?'"

No doubt France and England will stand together without faltering right on through to the end, but now there is no doubt about it; more than at any time since hostilities commenced, France is inclined to ask England to get a move on, to quit squabbling at home and get into the fight. For every hour the war is prolonged means many lives snapped off.

Not the least part of the resentment in France is caused by British insularity. In England, as George Clemenceau, former prime minister, writes: "After all, Calais is only Calais!" Calais is in France, a foreign country. The measures taken around London are an admission that Calais and Boulogne may fall into German hands. The French feel that if England does her duty the thing won't happen.

So the French not only think, but speak.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by hyperacidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. That we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is overhauling and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.
