PATROL THE ROADS

WITH the approach of the rainy season the conditions of the roads again become a matter of vital moment. Keeping a road in passable condition is not a very great problem in the summer, but in the winter the situation is wholly different. Too often a road that was in fair condition in the fall comes out a ruin in the spring, and heavy expense is necessary to bring it back to where it was before.

The reason for this is that good roads depend upon good drainage. If a good grade is maintained and the water carried off to the side the foundation of the average Oregon road will stand up as well in winter as in summer, but if drainage is not looked after the road goes to pieces in a hurry. Once the foundation is softened the damage is done.

It is in maintaining proper drainage that the patrol system performs one of its most important functions. A road that has been fairly well built does not go to pieces at once under the attack of water, but on the contrary the process of deterioration is comparatively slow. Ditches become stopped up and in the course of time water collects and softens the road. Culverts break down and become dams instead of outlets, with consequences that every one knows. On hilly roads obstructions in the ditches turn the water into the wheel tracks, and soon an expensive grade is destroyed. But these things do not happen all in a moment. They develop slowly.

It is here that the patrolman's work comes in. Under the present system these things are neglected and the destruction is permitted to go on unchecked day after day and week after week, but where a road is properly patrolled obstructions to drainage is stopped. The patrol system is so sane and sensible and business like that it is inconceivable why it is not generally adopted.—Eugene Register.

IT DOESN'T PAY to leave those bad hills—in the long run.

A PATROL SYSTEM on roads certainly sounds good.

ROAD CONGRESS OPENS MONDAY

PAN-AMERICAN ROADSTERS TO DISCUSS ALL PHASES OF ROAD BUILDING—IMPORTANT TO THE COAST STATES

(Herald Special Service)
OAKLAND, Sept. 11.—The Pan-American road congress, which meets in Oakland September 13 to 17, will discuss in detail all possible phases of highway construction, maintenance and administration, and will be of immense importance to all communities that are interested in the problem of good roads. Delegates to the convention have been appointed from practically every city and county on the Pacific coast, and the attendance promises to be greatly increased by others to whom road building is of interest.

The fact that every community offers a separate and distinct problem in its highway construction has attracted to the subject the attention of the ablest minds in the country, and this congress will be a medium by which road builders and engineers from various sections can get together and discuss their problems with other experts, being sure of obtaining the latest ideas.

The big congress has been arranged with the plan of covering all the details of road work by the presentation of papers and by discussion along lines of the most complete development, by experts on the various subjects. The congress is of special importance to the Pacific Coast communities, because of the great amount of highway construction now in progress in all the Western States. It is the hope of those in charge of the convention that not only will the knowledge of road building and maintenance be spread, but that also it will supply a force and a knowledge that will result in a more general public spirit for highway betterment.

What the War Moves Mean

By J. W. T. MASON
(Staff Correspondent United Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—With Grand Duke Nicholas removed from command of the Slav armies, the Russians hereafter will be directed by a board of control, presided over by the czar. This is the most probable inference to be drawn from the czar's telegram to President Poincare, announcing he had taken command, followed by the announcement that the duke had been made viceroy of the Caucasus.

The grand duke could not be publicly disgraced after having supreme command for more than a year. But privately he could be reduced in rank by just such action as the czar has taken.

At the beginning of the war the grand duke was made commander in chief. He superseded even the czar, whose title was simply "chief of the army." Later, it is reported, the duke treated the czar curtly when the latter visited the front.

The grand duke is of a stern, strict type, popular when victorious, but friendless and without a chance of holding a command when disaster follows disaster.

The duke attributed his reverses in the campaign to the inability of the Petrograd war office to supply him with sufficient ammunition. But certain high quarters criticized him personally. Recent reports were circulated that the duke was extremely ill, and needed a rest. These stories were probably part of a plot to force his retirement, however.

The czar's announcement of a shift is doubtless the culmination of a long intrigue against the duke. But the czar himself has no particular military ability. Left solely to him the campaign will bring forth worse disasters than it has already suffered. Hence he will unquestionably surround himself with a board of strategy to advise and direct the situation.

PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE IS RECOMMENDED FOR CITIES

United Press Service
ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 11.—A Canadian physician, Dr. C. J. Hastings of Toronto, suggested something new and interesting to the American Public Health Association meeting here today. He suggested a public health nurse, who would earn her salary as Chinese physicians earn theirs, by keeping the public well.

"The qualifications of a public health nurse," he said, "in addition to her training a reorganized school for the training of nurses, require that she must have a special training as a tuberculosis nurse; as a child welfare nurse; as a school nurse, a training in hygiene and sanitation; a training in social service, which will equip her to be an efficient agent; and in fact, she must be the homemaker caring for the race from the prenatal state until it passes on to the next cycle of existence. Heretofore children have been neglected until they enter school—before which, oft times, irreparable damage has been done.
