Critical Stage Here in Irrigation Progress, Said

This is a critical period in the irrigation development of the United States. The plain truth is that we have reached a point where it must be recognized that some readjustment of our plans and operations is necessary, in order to bring the largest measure of prosperity, said J. B. Case of Abilene, Kans., president of the International Irrigation Congress, speaking at Stockton today.

Today more than twenty-five government irrigation projects are completed, or soon will be, the direct outcome of the influence of this congress, and yet statistics show that less than half the land under these projects is occupied by settlers. We should discover the reason why these lands are not utilized, and remedy, if possible, the situation, for we shall not have the fullness of their worth until every farm under irrigation has a happy home thereon. We must recognize that while some large private enterprises have been successful, yet a large number have been financial failures. As a result, large amounts of bonds and stocks held by Eastern and foreign investors are today in disrepute, and little hope exists of securing additional capital for new irrigation investments until the man with money is convinced that irrigation is a practical and feasible proposition.

The time has come when we should get away from the theoretical, and base our ideas and plans upon the practical. The completion of government and state projects, and every irrigation enterprise, should be based upon the largest possible assurance that there will be water for every acre. Further, the time has come when the irrigation enterprises and the government undertakings should be placed in the hands of the Department of Agriculture.

At the basis of this problem is the price of land. It is a serious and important consideration. The price per acre charged to the home builder is too high for the average farmer to pay. With no improvements, without the ground properly graded, and with all the expenses of upkeep necessary until a crop can be sold, it makes a burden that few settlers are able to meet. Any irrigation project could be graded more cheaply and better by the men who organize the project than by the individual settler, and the land should be turned over to the farmer in a condition that will enable him to immediately start crop production and the sustenance of his family.

In order to bring about this readjustment of irrigation conditions, there should be an irrigation commission appointed whose duty it would be to investigate different projects with reasonable power to act. We can co-operate with the different states and the government to the end that the price of land may be in a measure controlled, and that the securities may attain a fixed value that would interest loan companies and investors.

The topic of this session is the colonization of irrigable lands. At Fresno our topic is "Irrigation Methods and Results." At Sacramento our topic will be "Financial Factors Affecting Irrigation, Rural Credits and Marketing." These matters come very close to the real success of our Western states.

One of the important legislative problems before us is that of rural credits. A low rate of interest with long time payments, lower prices for irrigated lands, and perhaps some method of government assistance to the settler during his first years of struggle are important factors in development.

Let us take the position of being a helper to the government and to the states. If we can bring from the congested districts of the East men and women and children, who are struggling for a bare existence, and place them out in the free, open lands of the West, we shall have performed a great service.

Will Enter University

Claude Hill, who has been employed in the mountains west of the city as lookout man, arrived here last night, and will leave in the morning for Eugene, where he will enter the state university. Hill is planning on taking a general course and specializing later in forestry.

Morning Blaze Causes Damage

$1,500 insurance, but recently having taken out $500 more on the stock. Donart's pool room next door was little damaged except by water, and he places his loss very small. He carried no insurance. A peculiar thing was that the clock on the wall next to the Shidler shop, did not stop running, though the wall was burned through in several places. Shidler's shop building was owned by Mrs. Bob Satterlee.

Hardenbrook removed practically all of his stock and fixtures except $140 worth, which he was unable to get out, being a roll top desk and other fixtures. He carried no insurance, and his loss will be largely from water. Boatwick's barber shop next door had $600 insurance on it, but practically everything was removed. A large number of lodgers above lost considerable due to fire, water and smoke, the damage being estimated at several hundred dollars. Earl Sharpe is proprietor of the place, and had considerable furnishings.

The building occupied by the rooming house, poolroom and tailor shop is owned by George Blehn, and was erected at a cost of $3,000, on which he has $1,000 insurance.

Shidler was preparing to go to the mills at Shippington to do some wiring this morning, and was welding some wires together to take along. He had just lighted his torch to do the welding when the whole room burst into flames. He states that he lost $1,000 worth of motorcycles himself. All that was saved was one motorcycle and his typewriter. It was but a minute after the explosion took place that the whole place was in flames, as the floor was soaked with oil in the machine shop, and a considerable stock of oil was on the shelves.

Before the fire alarm was sounded J. M. Holman and others had a stream of hose on the blaze, and before it had broken out of the building, but the intense heat and smoke drove them out of the building while the water spread the burning oil, and it was with great difficulty that the fire boys were able to confine it to a small area as they did, the wooden buildings burning like tinder.

Houston's Boat Not Balanced
Houston's boat which was launched Saturday afternoon in Lake Ewauna, with 300 people present to view the strange craft, proved to be improperly balanced, and it was impossible to attempt a proper trial of the boat's speed. By adding some stabilizers the boat is expected to be made seaworthy.

Ball Game Is Called Off

The ball game between the Ewauna "Yannigans" and the Klamath "Wonderers" was called off Sunday due to bad weather.

KLAMATH ROADS AVERAGE WELL

TRAVELERS FROM TROY, N. Y., SPEAK WELL OF KLAMATH ROADS COMPARED WITH OTHERS ON THE COAST

Klamath roads compare favorably and are better than many of the roads found so far on the coast, state Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Boardman, Miss W. K. Boardman, J. W. Pierce of Troy, N. Y., while passing through the city last week on their way to San Francisco and the fair. They are traveling in Pierce Arrow and Simplex machines.

They were greatly pleased with been traveling ever since. They came by way of Yellowstone Park, Glacier Park, Mt. Ranier and Crater Lake, and will return home by the southern route through the Southern states.

They were greatly pleased with Crater Lake and the scenery in this county on their trip through.

MORE FILM IS TO BE ADDED

MILLER CATCHES MANY INTERESTING VIEWS, AND WILL ADD 400 FEET MORE TO FILM FOR EXPOSITION

A trial show was given Saturday afternoon at the Temple theater by O. B. Miller, who has been making the film of Klamath county to be exhibited at the fair for the directors of the Commercial Club. It was decided afterward to add 400 feet to the film, in order to cover several more views in the county, as the first 1,000 had already been completed and several important features had not been included.

While the negative only was shown, a trial end of the program.

a good idea of the picture was obtained, and that it will do Klamath justice is fully believed by the committee, which attended the exhibition. Good views were obtained on the Weed ranch in the Wood River Valley, at Pelican Bay Lodge, Rocky Point, Eagle Ridge. Some excellent farming scenes were also taken on the farms south of the city, at the Lost River dam, and other points in the valley.

Pictures were also taken in the logging camps of the Pelican Bay mill, and more pictures will be taken at the Pelican Bay Mill, Algoma mill, Klamath Manufacturing company, as well as others. It is also planned to get a good picture of the new $70,000 road along the eastern shore of Upper Klamath Lake, showing the roadway and the view obtained along the road by the lake. Six hundred miles have been traveled by Miller in taking the pictures.

It is planned now to have the pictures completed by September 20th and to stage the benefit exhibition about that time. The show will be held in Houston's opera house, which J. V. Houston has donated to the Commercial club for the exhibition.

Moving Pictures

"A Fool There Was," is the big feature photoplay that will be presented at the Star theater tonight. This is the second of the Fox productions to be shown. The picture is taken from Kipling's poem, "The Vampire," and is pronounced one of the best attractions of recent months. Theda Bara, known as the "Vampire," will be seen in the leading role, assisted by Edward Jose and a large supporting cast. The production is in five parts. Other pictures will be shown in addition to the feature. The Peerless Orchestra will attend to the musical end of the program.

HOW TO AVOID HAVING CANCER

"DON'TS" IF YOU WOULD PREVENT CULTIVATING A DANGEROUS MALADY FROM THE OREGON MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

PORTLAND, Sept. 13.—If you would avoid contracting cancer you must observe the following don'ts: Don't hold a pipe always in the same position in your mouth; you'll catch cancer of the lips if you do. Don't rasp your tongue over a roughened tooth; it invites cancer of the tongue.

Don't eat your food hot; it irritates the stomach, and tends to bring on cancer affection.

These are some of the warnings sounded by the Oregon State Medical Association. Cancer was declared to be on the increase. However, in a paper on the subject read by Dr. K. A. J. Mackenzie of Portland, it was asserted that the dread disease is curable if taken in its earliest stages and subjected to surgical treatment.
