THE LAND GRANT CONFERENCE

THE conference between state officials and officials of the Southern Pacific railway, who have to deal with the disposition of the Oregon and California land grant case meets at Salem tomorrow.

The state conferees are Governor Withycombe, Treasurer Kay, Secretary Olcott, Senators Bean, Gariand and Vawter of the land grant counties, and Mr. Spence, master of the State Grange.

They are about as solid a body of careful business men as it would be possible to make up, and it is expected the Southern Pacific company will be represented by D. W. Campbell, Wm. E. Herrin and others.

Ex-Congressman LaFerty of Portland, in a column paid advertisement, advises the people of Oregon to "raise hell." He says men, women and children in Oregon are starving and are "land hungry."

He says 23,000 acres of "the most fertile land in the state are being kept from the poor and the land hungry" under an act of congress passed forty years ago. Competent judges say not over one-sixth of the grant is fit to support families.

One E. W. Williamson, representing the department of justice, has been in Oregon for some time investigating the land grant, and he is quoted as saying no two men in Oregon agree as to what should be done.

The land grant conference held at Salem adopted resolutions creating this joint conference committee, and declared its main purpose to be to put an end to litigation and holding up of taxes.

There are politicians in the state who can keep before the people as long as there is strife and contention, and who do not want an amicable settlement based upon justice to all parties. The primary interest of the state is in protecting settlers with families who desire to make homes on the land where they can become permanent producers and tax payers, not in the speculative class.

The state is also deeply interested in collecting back taxes due eighteen counties for two years past, and amounting to nearly $2,000,000, the counties being in debt and paying interest.

SCHOOL SANITATION

FORTY states of the union have taken some legal action toward safe guarding the sanitation of public school buildings according to a bulletin on "Schoolhouse Sanitation," just issued by the Bureau of Education of the United States Department of the Interior.

"Probably nine-tenths of the existing regulation of this sort has come within the past decade," declares the bulletin. "Each state profits by the experience of forty-seven others. A law passed in one extreme of the country today is copied next month or next year by a state 3,000 or 2,000 miles distant."

Thirty-eight states have some legal provision regarding the school site according to the bulletin. Nearly all of these provisions are statewide in their application, and are mandatory in character. These provisions include the proximity of "noxiousness," availability of the site, and the size of the site. Nineteen states have laws prohibiting the location of any school building within a specified distance from places where liquor is sold, from gambling houses, houses of prostitution, and noisy or smoky factories.

Thirty of the states have sought to regulate the water supply of the public school. "The revolt against the common drinking cup," says the bulletin, "has come within the past five years. Kansas was the pioneer, but other states followed rapidly, so that now half of the entire number have either a law or a regulation regarding drinking cups."

Scattered Shots

SPRINKLING OF THE power of the press, the following is from a paper in a small Middle Western town:

"Owing to the overcrowded condition of our columns, a number of births and deaths are unavoidably postponed until next week."

IF YOU WON'T repair your sidewalk yourself, the city will do so, Mr. Negligent One, and they'll plaster a lien against your lot for the cost.

IT IS JUST about the time of the year for the old fashioned house-keeper to make the fruitcakes for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Years.

THIS LAST LITTLE flurry was no doubt a little reminder to some of our people so they will get their wood in the shed before winter really starts. While many women have been convinced that it is part of their house-keeping duty to split the fuel, no "real lady" will peacefully consent to throwing the unsplit wood into the shed.

AND CHRISTMAS just thirty-eight days off.

BOXING SMOKER MAKES BIG HIT

tricks which professional pugns have marred the sport are all eliminated, too, in the amateur game.

While Kid Harvey and Yaino, the bantamweight contenders, were donning the big pillows for the first round event, Jack Linkenbach stepped in the ring to referee, and Louis Gerber took the role of announcer and time-keeper. The crowd cheered lustily, for two fairer men could not be found in a two day's journey.

Harvey had it over his opponent in reach and height, and he carried the fight to him practically all through the bout. Yaino showed some cleverness in defense, and he prettily blocked a number of punches that might have stung. The decision was given to Harvey.

Extremely fast and furious was the four-round mix between Turpin and Bowman, lightweight. The way these boys sailed into each other brought the fans to their feet, and the cheering was continuous throughout the fight. The pace set in the first round was the gait that can only be expected from two amateurs, eager for the fray, and determined to end the mill in the opening chapter. Bowman sent his opponent to his knees shortly after the starting gong, and he took the offensive in this round, although he was sent into the ropes by one of Turpin's rushes.

The second round was equally furious, and in this session both men fell half out of the ring in their whirlwind interchange of fistcuts. The third round saw a little slackening in the pace, but not the spirit of the battle, as both boys were tiring from their breakneck pace. Bowman was more fatigued than his opponent, and noticing this, Turpin started an offensive that had the Bonanzaite going. Blows were rained on the head and wind until Bowman went down for the count.

Haywood took the wrestling honors from Buck, after losing the first fall, which Buck secured with a neat half-nelson after half a minute of work. The second fall came in about a quarter of a minute, when Buck, whirling out of his bigger opponent's hold, fell. Haywood followed this like a flash, and put both of Buck's shoulders down. Buck was on the defensive in the fight for the final fall, and after his failure to break a toe hold by getting a similar hold on his companion, he twisted out of his grip in good shape. He made a fine spin to save himself when Haywood tried to stop him over, but in less than a minute Haywood secured the winning tumble.

The way that George Phipps, colored, set the pace in the first round of his mix with Bobbie Allen was great to behold, and in addition to placing a wicked wallop over Allen's eye, the dusky lad brought a stream of blood from Bobbie's forehead. To make it short, he put up a fight that the war censors would classify as a "vigorous offensive."

The first round was all Phipps'. It was also Phipps' all. Allen came back with a vengeance in the second round, and the first wallop he shot out found a resting place on the negro's jaw, and appeared to shift his levers from high to intermediate for Allen's blows thereafter kept Phipps on the defensive. In less than a minute the colored boy was bleeding at the nose, taking hard wallops to the head and body, feeling tired and rushing into clinches to stop the punishment. It was in the middle of the round that he staggered into a clinch which Linkenbach had to break, and before he could put his tired arms up in fighting attitude, Allen gave him the last little tap necessary to end the bout.

The fans were highly appreciative of the clean entertainment furnished by Manager Fee of the Athletic Club, and this institution promises to become extremely popular and grow in membership. It is an organization that fills a long felt need, as its gymnasium is gradually filling with gymnastic and athletic equipment.

The average depth of the oceans is from two to three miles. At the mouth of the Rio de la Plata, off the coast of South America, the depth of the Atlantic is said to be more than 45,000 feet, or more than eight miles.
