KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1916

WHERE CAN THEY CONGREGATE?

THE CLOSING of the saloons removed not only liquor from Oregon. It also eliminated the meeting place of thousands of men all over Oregon.

Because a man spent time in a saloon was not a sign that he was a hopeless inebriate. Many went there in order to help pass away time that hung heavy on them.

The Presbyterian church will this evening hold a meeting to discuss the question of providing some sort of quarters or a resort where these men can meet informally and spend their spare time in a profitable way.

These men should not look upon this as a charitable move, for it certainly is not. This is a civic question, pure and simple.

Now THAT it looks as though we are to get a federal building, I'm wondering if its location will cause another split in town like the court house did.

Scattered Shots

WHY NOT Klamath county pine for flooring and interior finish in the Coast's federal building? asks Senator Lane.

FROM THE WAY the bounty goes up, it appears that coyotes are far more valuable dead than alive.

CAN THERE possibly be any connection between the fact that there is to be a mass meeting tonight to discuss plans for a fight for lower freight rates and the fact that Traveling Freight and Passenger Agent J. E. Light and other Espee officials are visiting Klamath Falls today?

What the War Moves Mean

By J. W. T. MASON (Written for the United Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—With the Russians now thirty-five miles inside of Galicia, their offensive is assuming serious proportions.

In this manner, the first condition governing Rumania's participation with the allies will have been met, for after the Carpathian passes are in Russia's power, the czar may buy Rumania's assistance.

British Press Wins Out in Fight on Government

United Press Service LONDON, Jan. 5.—England's merriest little internal war, the government versus the press, is all over but the shouting.

Newspapers with sufficient intrepidity at the beginning of the war to attack the government for alleged mistakes and to persist in the practice, are claiming complete victory.

When the fault finding newspapers leveled their guns of criticism on the alleged diplomatic fluke in the Balkans which allowed Turkey and eventually Bulgaria to join the Central Powers; and when these papers were joined by the Manchester Guardian, England's leading liberal organ, the government took more notice.

1.—Formation of a coalition cabinet to eliminate politics from the administration of the war.

2.—Establishment of a department of munitions, apart from the war office, to adequately provide the army with arms and ammunition, especially high explosive shells.

3.—General interment of all enemy aliens.

4.—War office permission for newspaper correspondents to visit the front in order to keep the nation in touch with its soldiers.

5.—Measures to counteract excessive food wastage in military camps.

6.—Efforts to conserve financial and economic resources and to prevent public waste.

7.—Retaliatory use of poison gas against the Germans.

8.—Placing of cotton on the list of absolute contraband.

9.—Relaxation, to a certain degree, of excessive censorship restrictions.

10.—Recruiting of single men in preference to married men for army service.

11.—Complete reorganization of the anti-aircraft defense of London.

12.—Official announcements from the various government departments having to do with the war, for the purpose of counteracting public opinion based on enemy propaganda.

13.—Placing of war trophies—captured guns, aeroplanes, torpedos and mines on public exhibition in London and other cities.

14.—Following up the French innovation of equipping soldiers of the first line with steel helmets as protection against shrapnel.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 5.—The 1916 legislature, which is to open here today noon, will make or break Governor Whitman politically, say the capitol's political prophets.

His budget proposals, said to have been planned for economy and system in the state's government, will be pressed determinedly upon the legislators, Whitman says.

The governor intends to keep in close touch with the legislature. He may even adopt President Wilson's example and personally read important messages to the senate and assembly.

The people of the United States have no hatred in their hearts, for they are without fear. They have no envy, for no one can add to their wealth.

Greetings for 1916 From Great Men

William J. Bryan: "The year 1915 has witnessed a conflict unparalleled in history. Whether measured by numbers engaged, by destructiveness of implements employed or by cost in life and treasure. Our nation has wisely maintained neutral neutrality and refused to be drawn into the war."

William G. McAdoo: "God grant that the American people may continue to enjoy the inestimable blessings of peace and prosperity during the new year; that the soul of the nation may always be exalted above the material resources; that patriotism may never die; that love of country may always transcend personal interest; that peace may be restored to stricken Europe; that the American people may have a noble part in this restoration, and that they may always be foremost in helping the distressed and in useful service to humanity."

Josephus Daniels: "The optimism of America is justified by business conditions. This has been a happy Christmas, and we enter the new year with the confidence that it holds in store larger opportunities and more generally diffused prosperity than any previous year in the history of our country."

Johann von Bernstorff: "I desire to convey my felicitations to the people of the United States for a happy and prosperous new year."

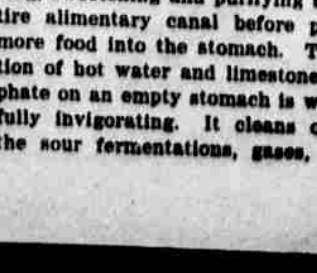

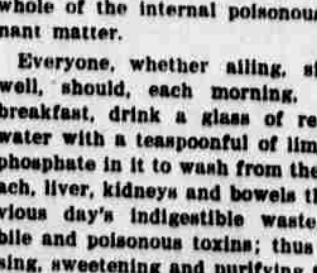

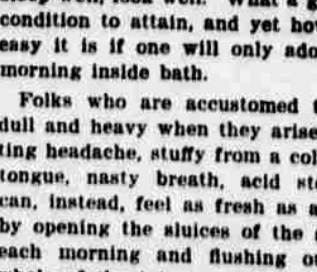

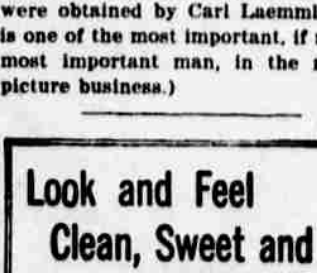

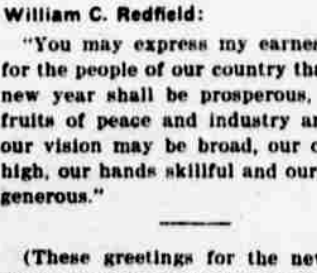

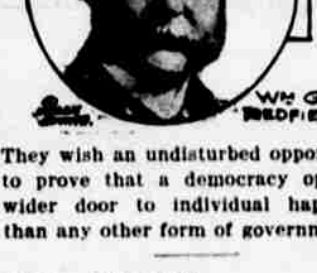

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice: "On behalf of Great Britain I wish to convey to the people of the United States best wishes for a happy new year, and may the prosperity of the country be of long duration."

Franklin K. Lane: "The people of the United States have no hatred in their hearts, for they are without fear. They have no envy, for no one can add to their wealth."

They wish an undisturbed opportunity to prove that a democracy opens a wider door to individual happiness than any other form of government."

William C. Redfield: "You may express my earnest hope for the people of our country that their new year shall be prosperous, full of fruits of peace and industry and that our vision may be broad, our courage high, our hands skillful and our hearts generous."

and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—Ad.
