REPUDIATION—OR EFFICIENCY

Great was the howl raised in some quarters recently when the county court refused to provide in the budget for a $100,000 warrant redemption fund. Many were the epithets hurled at Hanks, and unflattering, to say the least, were the terms some sources used in branding him as a welscher, and one who would repudiate every promise and obligation.

The silence maintained by Hanks and his supporters through all this abuse is splendidly explained in the county court's account of its stewardship for the first year in office. During that time the indebtedness of the county was reduced nearly $125,000. And this, mind you, gentle reader, without a special levy.

Now, if Hanks, Hagestein and McCornack can make such a saving in the conduct of the affairs of Klamath county in one year, what is the use of their making a special warrant redemption fund? They have amply proven themselves equal to curtailing expenses without being niggardly, and made a reduction in the county's liabilities of over more than the much talked of fund's total, and at the same time, taxpayers have been exempted from paying the extra tax such a special fund would impose.

DECISION FOR PROGRESS

THE decision of the United States supreme court in the Alabama water power case is a long step in the direction of allowing industrial development to proceed in the Pacific Coast states.

The decision upholds the doctrine that the rights of eminent domain and condemnation proceedings may be authorized by the state legislatures to allow power corporations to develop plants.

If the Pacific Coast states had to wait for power development on the federal or state government, with all their wasteful extravagance and political pull, they would get it slowly.

The decision gives the states power of eminent domain over federal lands and forest reserves, and is far-reaching in making irrigation enterprises possible by using electricity for pumping.

The decision will encourage private capital to seek investment in large enterprises in this state, and will make available 2,000,000 horsepower by giving access to the streams on public lands.

John A. Britton of the Pacific Gas and Electric company, says the decision is of the utmost importance to the Pacific Coast states, and that here after lands set aside by the federal government cannot block development.

Justice Holmes wrote the decision, and in answer to the charge of the federal bureau land officials that the proposed condemnation was not for public use, made this statement:

"To gather the streams from waste and to draw from them energy, labor without brains, and so to save mankind from toil, is to supply what next to intelligence is the very foundation of all our achievements. If that purpose is not public, we should be at a loss to say what it."

SMALL PAPERS SCORE

IT IS worthy of more than passing note that leadership in the discussion of public questions during the year 1915 was taken by the country press rather than by metropolitan newspapers.

Many months ago the smaller republican papers throughout the country began a thorough discussion of all the subjects that are likely to be prominent in the campaign of 1916, and they have continued that discussion with a thoroughness which reflects credit upon the rural press.

It should be a matter of gratification to country editors, therefore, to observe that within recent weeks the metropolitan papers have been giving more attention to economic problems which have been the subject of discussion, so long in the country papers.

Scattered Shots

WE HEAR NO kicks about Klamath weather nowadays, when every other section of the Coast is suffering storms, floods and blizzards.

THIS SPRING RAIN doesn't dampen the joy of the dry farmer and the stockman a durned bit.

SOME MEN can accomplish things, if given the means to do so, and others get the same results without the means. Our county court has sure swatted the county's debts without a special levy.

THIS LUBITANIA must be a pretty fine lady, according to Arabella, the way all the high officials are writing each other about her.

STATE MAY ALSO INSURE THE SICK

CALIFORNIA CONSIDERS EXTENDING INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENT POLICIES TO INCLUDE OLD AGE AND SICKNESS

United Press Service

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 7.—With the final organization meeting scheduled for February 21, the California Social Insurance Commission will soon begin a statewide investigation to find whether it will be advisable for the state to extend the industrial accident insurance system so that similar insurance will be possible for sickness, old age, unemployment, etc., for wage earners.

Paul Herriott, chairman of the commission says dates will soon be announced for public hearings in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Sacramento. Employers, labor leaders, workmen, insurance experts and charity workers will be asked to attend these hearings and give testimony to the commission.

"The industrial accident plan," says Herriott, "which has done such great good is really a form of social insurance, but it applies only in cases of accidents and occupational diseases. These public hearings will give us a good line on whether the insurance system should apply in cases of ordinary sickness, old age, invalidity, unemployment and the like. Of course it may not be advisable to make this state social insurance idea too widespread all at once, and the commission may see to it to recommend to the legislature that it be limited at the state to only one feature, ordinary sickness or unemployment."

Briefly, the social insurance plan would provide insurance for workers in case they should become ill or incapacitated, or should be forced out of work. Just who would pay the premiums for such insurance is a thing to be threshed out. The public hearings are expected to reveal what proportion of the premium should be paid by the person insured, the employer and the state.

It would be optional with the wage earner in taking advantage of the social insurance system.

Barbara Nachtrieb, a woman attorney of Berkeley, has been chosen secretary of the commission at a salary of $2,400 a year.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—A.D.
