

PORTLAND USING MULES AND PLOWS

ARMY OF FOUR HUNDRED MEN
WITH SHOVELS IS SUPPLE-
MENTED BY TEAMS IN STREET
CLEARING WORK

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 7.—Mules and farm plows attacked the ice covered streets of Portland today supplementing the work of four thousand snow shovelers. The plows were run along street car rails, tearing up the packed snow and ice in some places a foot deep.

The mules walked through it as though they were doing the spring plowing.

Hoops, Me Dear? My Yes; Many at the Style Show

(Herald Special Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—From Chicago tonight messages of hoops and hoops and more hoops and short jackets, and tight bodices, will be flashed to New York, London, and even to Paris itself.

Beginning tonight, Chicago garment manufacturers, hatters, milliners and jewelers will stage for a week, "Nothing to Wear but Clothes," the clothes extravaganza around which Chicago's 1916 spring style show revolves. Pretty girls from the Chicago Grand Opera company will wear the feminine togs.

A peep behind the scenes today showed that some of the skirts tended toward hoops, and ran down over the ankles after being worn almost up to the knees all winter.

The crinoline skirt, too, was on the job. They were worn in fabrics such as failles, taffetas, grosgrains, and even garbarines and serges for the promenade; and in nylon, marquisette, tulle and chiffon combined with filmy laces and the suggest of bodies in materials of different textures and colors.

In spring dresses the light delicate shades prevailed. Over-dress effects, full length sleeves and both high and low collars were worn. Cream dress fabrics were among the favorites and novelty weaves were scarce. Black and white fabrics in checks, stripes and plaids were in high favor, too. Spangled and beaded trimmings of high quality were pronounced. Many of the finer dresses bore iridescent trimmings and nets.

There is no relief for poor hubby, for spring waists were featured by buttons in the back, though a few button-in-front styles were shown.

Milady's early spring millinery seemed largely a combination of straw with satin, Georgette crepe, or hatter's plush. Shapes were small and medium. Flowers, fancy feathers, ribbon and malines were the trimming effects.

Evening cloaks like grandma's were full to take in and hang gracefully over the hooped skirt. These in beautiful shot taffetas or soft brocades trimmed with fur proved popular.

EXHIBITION AT OPERA HOUSE
AND ORPHEUS NEXT WEEK,
PREPARATORY TO SENDING THE FILMS ON TOUR

For the benefit of those who were turned away from the crowded opera house when the Klamath moving pictures were exhibited last September, and for others who wish to see the local views which made such a hit at the world's fair at San Francisco, these films will again be shown by the Klamath Commercial Club before they are shipped for exhibition in the East. They will be shown at Houston's opera house Tuesday, February 16th, and at the Orpheus Wednesday, February 17th.

Arrangements are being made to include in the exhibition the celebrated Salisbury animal pictures, many of which were taken at points in Klamath county. The reputation of the latter film is so widespread as to make comment unnecessary, and in conjunction with the Klamath movies, a most entertaining and instructive evening is assured the public at a very low price.

Moving Pictures

Once in a generation or so a book finds its way into history. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was a book of this kind. By crystallizing the scattered elements of a great problem it moved a nation.

Today there is another problem no less vital to our country's welfare than the one that inspired Harriet Beecher Stowe. Slavery threatened our unity; today our very existence is threatened by our defenselessness.

The solution of the one involved us in war; the solution of the other will prevent war.

To bring this great problem home to the millions of American people, J. Stewart Blackton conceived a great idea.

Pioneer in the field of motion pictures, recognized as the great authority on motion pictures, one of the heads of a great motion picture industry—he saw an opportunity to utilize the great and hitherto unused power of motion pictures to help toward the solution of this national problem.

To carry out this idea he produced a wonderful picture; from it he has written a wonderful book.

He took the facts and statistics contained in Hudson Maxim's "Defenseless America," and around them weaved an absorbing story. With the unlimited resources of the Vitagraph company of America at his command he translated this story into motion pictures. The result is "The Battle Cry of Peace," the nine reel Vitagraph feature to be shown the afternoon and evening of February 20 at Houston's opera house.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is the first motion picture to be used to expound an important, nation-wide propaganda. Its object is to bring to the notice of the greatest number of people in the shortest possible time the defenselessness of our country; not only to make the American people realize our condition as a nation, but to show them also the consequences to which this condition may lead, and finally to show them how to remedy this condition.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is a call to arms—not for war, but for peace. It will be shown in motion picture theaters, schools, churches and colleges throughout the length and the breadth of this country. It will arouse in the heart of every American a realization of his strict accountability to his country in time of need. Scores of prominent Americans—in army, navy and administrative circles of our government—have contributed to this great production. Notable among its sponsors and endorsers are Dr. Lyman Abbott, the Hon. Lindley M. Garrison, Major General Leonard Wood and Admiral George Dewey, representing the church, the state, the army and the navy. "The Battle Cry of Peace" will appear in book form simultaneously with the release of the film, thus for the first time linking definitely the publication of a work through two different media—literature and the motion picture.

Those who failed to see the Griffith Sennett all star program at the Orpheus last evening are missing a treat if they do not see it tonight. This is a better program than has ever been shown in Klamath Falls before for the small sum of 15c.
