BEGIN HOT WATER
 DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT
 Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if you eat sour and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, consti pated, nervous, sallow, and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bath ing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your in side bathing immediately upon aris ing in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poison ous waste, gas, and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.
 To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body im purities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost taste less, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.
 Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and lime stone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bath ing before breakfast. They are as sured they will become real cranks on the subject shortly.—Adv.

Trip Across Germany by Ford Party
One of the Queerest of Queer Junket

By CHARLES P. STEWART
 (United Press Staff Correspondent)

THE HAGUE, Jan. 26.—(By mail) —The Ford peace party crossed Ger many in a sealed train. It was a very queer trip. The peace delegates, newspapermen and women and the camp followers left Copenhagen for The Hague Friday morning. They reached the Dutch capital twenty-six hours later pretty nearly dead, for not much sleeping had been done on the trip and the newspapermen at least, had had very little for several nights before.
 The night before the mission left Copenhagen the business staff gave out tickets entitling the expedition's leaders, like Louis P. Lochner, Mrs.
 Rosika Schwimmer, Ellis O. Jones, and a few others, and likewise the peace delegates, to seat reservations on the train. It was announced that the hated newspaper contingent would have to hang on any old place.
 This did not surprise the correspond ents. They had expected it. Nor did it surprise the favored ones. They, too, expected it.
 There was a surprise in store, how ever. If anybody ever was cordially hated, the peace party was hated by the expedition's business manage ment. The correspondents had no reservations, to be sure, so they went where the business management sent them, on the station platform. A nice, liberal allowance of first class, well heated, comfortably upholstered com partments had been saved for them and into these they piled at the busi ness management's order.
 The peace crowd hunted their reser vations. They were in a string of third-class coaches at the rear, cold as a barn and about as comfortable as an American cattle car. The cor respondents went aft at intervals and gave the peace party the haw-haw.
 It was uncharitable, but the corres pondents had not always been chari tably treated by the peace delegates.
 The delegates tried once to rush the correspondent's end of the train.
 The attempt was a failure. Blows were exchanged. The correspondent's resolute attitude was sufficient. Some hard words were exchanged, how ever. Later several bottles of cham pagne circulated in newspaper circles.
 It was supposed popularly that they came from Gaston Plamiff, business director of the tour after Henry Ford's departure.
 There are two ferries between Cop enhagen and the German Baltic coast port of Warnemuede. The first is about fifteen minutes; the second two hours.
 Lunch is served on both, but Plain tiff had arranged to pay for it only on the second, from Gjedser to War nemuede. Unhappily a few members of the party had not understood this, got lunches on the first boat and had to settle their own bills. This was the one tragedy of the journey.
 At Warnemuede the party stepped from the ferry onto a platform with a train at one side, the boat at a sec ond, water at a third and a cordon of German soldiers at the fourth and last. Lochner called out the mem bers' names in alphabetical order, and as each name was called, its ow ner stepped forward, presented his passport to a German officer and en tered the train. He entered at the rear door and went forward. Only that one door was open. The others were locked and guarded. For all that, the Germans were exceedingly courteous.
 Stories were current that every body would be stripped and searched.
 In fact, Lieutenant Governor Bethes of South Carolina, who did not make the trip with the Ford party, but alone, was forced to take off every stitch of clothing and even had his toes pried apart to be sure there were no incriminating documents between them. Nothing of this kind happen ed to any member of the Ford party.
 The nearest approach there was to a search was an hour or two out of Warnemuede when a German civilian came through the train, politely showed his credentials and took a very profanity glance inside a few valises. He did not look in all. The trunks were not touched. There was no personal search whatever. Not a question was asked. Previously, however, an elaborate warning had been issued against any attempt to carry printed, typewritten or written matter through Germany. Many ar ticles were specified also which must not cross the border. The pilgrims, thoroughly scared, obeyed these or ders scrupulously.
 Mrs. Schwimmer received a tele gram at Warnemuede. A German officer handed it to her. She glanced at it and hid it in her sash instantly.

Of course, suspicious members of the party were immediately interested.
 I got a telegram myself. It was from Carl W. Ackerman, Berlin man ager for the United Press. Ackem an had expected to meet the party at Warnemuede. His telegram said:
 "Semi-officially advised not to meet party. Serry."
 "I would like an explanation of this," said the German officer who handed it to me. I explained.
 "But," said the officer, "what about this last word—serry?"
 "Serry," said I. "He means he regrets he can not come."
 "Oh! I see," said the officer, "ser ry's an error." So everything was satisfactory. Between Warnemuede and Bentheim one of the peace dele gates got to discussing his expenses.
 "The trip has cost me $7 up to date," he said, "and I am hopeful of getting back to New York on not exceeding $3 more. Ten dollars is a good deal, considering what we were told that our expenses would be paid by Henry Ford." Though the train was guarded at every exit, there was no order that curtains be drawn. This did not make any difference. It was dark before the party left Warn emuede, and it was between two and three a. m. when the pilgrims landed at Bentheim, the last German town before crossing the Dutch frontier.

Still, there was little to be seen at the lighted stations. This little seem ed significant. The train ran through the big central bahnhof in Hamburg before 10 a. m. In ordinary times the busiest of places at such an hour, at this time it was almost deserted.
 Breme was just the same. So were the stopping places in all the other important towns between the German coast and the Dutch frontier.
 At Hamburg a hospital train was standing in the station. Except for these glimpses, the journey might as well have been taken through the United States or darkest Africa for all the idea it gave, through a car window, of wartime Germany.
 The German major in charge of the train from Warnemuede to Hamburg spoke no English, but did his best to be polite. He visited compartment after compartment, tried to talk with the aid of an occasional volunteer, explained without a show of emotion that his son had just been killed on the west front and smiled acknowl edgments of the compliments paid him on the strength of the iron cross he wore. Some of the pilgrims want ed to send post cards. At one of the stations the major sent a non-com missioned officer to get a supply, a censor passed on them on the train and promised to mail them. Presum ably he did so. All the military in formation it was possible to accumu late on that trip could not have wor ried the German authorities much.

 "The best dinner we have had since we left New York," was the pilgrims' general verdict on the meal the Ger mans fed them. It was so good, in fact, that few appeared to notice that meat was absent from the menu. At Hamburg the iron-crossed major left the train and his place was taken by an iron-crossed lieutenant who had traveled extensively in the United States and spoke tolerable English.
 He was very sociable, drank to the peace of the mission's success on board the train, and again, at Bent heim, hoped in a short speech to the delegates that the expedition would accomplish its object.
 Dr. Jones responded, expressing the pilgrims' appreciation of the courtesy and then all the pilgrims "hocked" the German government. Peace dele gates "hocking" the German govern ment! Nevertheless they did it.
 The only official or semi-official recognition the peace mission has re ceived or is likely to receive in Eur ope was this recognition in Germany.
 The way in which the German authori ties secured $500 in gold from the expedition caused a good deal of com ment. Before leaving Copenhagen everybody was warned against try ing to take any gold coin through Ger many. Gaston Plamiff, business man ager of the mission and Ford's per sonal representative, decided to at tempt to keep $500, however.
 It was American money. Plamiff gave it to Mme. Schwimmer to carry because being a Hungarian and there fore a subject of one of the central powers, he thought her less likely to be searched. When the time came to settle for the special train, however, the Germans said the price was $500 American gold.
