THAT PROHIBITION ORDINANCE

THE COUNCIL last night passed its prohibition ordinance in an amended form, the penalties being changed to comply with the state law. But the question now arises: "Is this constitutional?"

The provision of the city charter, as adopted by the people, is that the municipal court is empowered to impose fines of not more than $100 or prison sentences of not more than thirty days. The provisions of the state law allow the imposition of fines from $100 to $500, and imprisonment from ninety days to two years.

This, apparently, is beyond the jurisdiction of the city under the present charter. Does the passage of the law by the state legislature automatically confer such additional power upon the city?

Section 2, article 11 of the Oregon Constitution, as amended by an initiative measure in 1906, indicates that the state has no such power. The section follows:

"Corporations shall be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by the legislative assembly by special laws. The legislative assembly shall not enact, amend, or repeal any charter or act of any incorporation for any municipality, city or town. The legal voters of every city are hereby granted power to enact and amend their municipal charter, subject to the constitution and criminal laws of the state of Oregon."

The question now seems to be whether or not a charter amendment will be necessary before the ordinance as passed with an emergency clause last night, can become a valid measure.

BUSINESS ENTERPRISE

FARMERS and merchants are mutually dependent. Farmers do not always realize or admit their dependence upon the local retailers, but merchants have been free enough in admitting their dependence upon the farmers, though their plea for farmers' support has not always been of a character to win either the support or the respect of farmers.

Sentiment undoubtedly is a potent factor in business, but it can not be relied upon altogether as a means of holding the trade of a community to the home stores. Money talks, and the strong appeals constantly being made by catalog houses on the basis of money must be met by local retailers with some argument other than "loyalty to home merchants." Dire predictions regarding the disaster that will overtake towns as a result of the mail order habit convince nobody of the soundness of the policy of trading at home.

The life of the farmer is not ideal; the financial return he realizes from his efforts is not always commensurate with the energy he expends in tilling the soil. To many farmers "cash money" is a scarce article. They trade their butter and eggs for groceries and dry goods, and they sell their crops and livestock only once a year. All the rest of the year they have visions of vanishing substance—a diminishing bank account—and often they are confronted with the prospect of a shortage or even a failure of crops.

People in that state of mind are not charitably inclined, and consequently they do not take much stock in arguments about "loyalty to home merchants," "preserving the home town," etc. They would be glad to have their merchants prosper. But they want to believe that they are getting the worth of their money every time they spend a dollar for groceries or other merchandise. They are of course often deluded when they buy by mail, but it is more to the purpose for the local merchant to convince them that they get their money's worth at his store than that they do not get it from the mail order concern.

Moreover, it is as much to the purpose that the local producer gets a good price for his products as that he gets a reasonable value for the returns from those products. Often the farmer feels as if he were "between the devil and the deep sea," in that he sells his goods at the lowest price and buys at the highest. It is the part of the merchant to enable him to get a good price for what he sells and to supply his needs in merchandise at right prices. In that way he can help the farmer to prosper, can retain his good will and his trade. To do this means to engage in community development, and to display business enterprise in buying, advertising and selling merchandise and in the general conduct of his store.

Scattered Shots

GARDEN SEEDS and tools in the store windows are mighty tempting all right, but it is hardly advisable to pawn one's overcoat just now in order to buy them.

SPEAKING OF OPTIMISTS, don't forget the people who invested a few dollars in canines a couple of months ago, certain that they would look something like bulldogs when they get a little older.

AND BRYAN isn't the only supporter of Wilson in 1912 who will take a different action this year.

dopetown diddings

DOPETOWN, Feb. 17.—Professor Marblenut, Dopetown's imminent (correct) scientist, has arranged to furnish this city with a perpetual cool breeze and two showers a week all next summer. The breeze is to be made by a gigantic electric fan operated by current generated in a plant on the banks of the Sican River, at Pigankle Falls.

This monster fan will be made of steel. The showers will be made by an apparatus built on the same principle as a Chinese laundryman's face when he takes a mouthful of water and sprays the wash.

The water will come from the river and will be filtered, then sprayed over the city from the face of a colossal Chinese figure standing on the left bank of the river above the power house Professor Marblenut is the same man who attempted suicide with a doughnut when his wife left him last year. A friend took the deadly thing from him and saved his life.

Mrs. Deacon Mudleg got so mad when the deacon came home seeing double last night that she threw his bag of "medicinal" bourbon out the bedroom window. It fell in the White Plymouth Rock Rock's trough and broke.

Mrs. Mudleg, not knowing this, was astounded early today when she looked out the kitchen window and saw about fifty of her fat, motherly old hens reeling around the yard, leering and cackling idiotically at one another. They seemed to be celebrating something, and upon looking closer Mrs. Mudleg saw two of the most dominating of the roosters, badly pecked and clawed, lying unconscious near the fence, while the others were limping around muttering to themselves and keeping as far away as possible from the stewed matrons.

The deacon was for killing the hens, but Mrs. Mudleg said no, she would get the old girls some more bourbon, and maybe—maybe, drink some herself.

Here From Fort.

Frank Burns of the firm of Utter & Burns, owners of considerable ranch and sawmill property in the Fort Klamath country, is down on business. Mr. Burns states that there is at least a foot of snow in the valley, and judging from the recent chinook winds and rain in that section, the snow will soon disappear.

Dire Distress

It Is Near at Hand to Hundreds of Klamath Falls Readers

Don't neglect an aching back. Backache is often the kidneys' cry for help.

Neglect hurrying to the kidneys' aid means that urinary troubles may follow.

Or danger of worse kidney trouble. Here's Medford testimony. C. C. Kribs, grocer, W. Main street, Medford, Ore., says: "I suffered from a dull ache in the small of my back for months. The kidney secretions were unnatural, and I had trouble in controlling them. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills and took two or three boxes. The pain left me and my kidneys are now in much better shape."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Kribs had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Shonts and His $250,000 Checks

Here are photographs of the checks for $500,000, given by T. P. Shonts, president of the street railroad system of New York, to J. P. Morgan, which have been unearthed in the legislative investigation of the deal. Morgan & Co. agreed for the Interborough company to furnish $100,000,000, if that company got from New York city the contract to build new subways.

Something of a sensation had been created by the discoveries of the committee. The Morgan firm and the Interborough officials maintain it was a fair and legitimate transaction.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of combustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins, and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember, inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.—Adv.

The March American Magazine

In the March American Magazine are capital short stories and special articles. There is also an interesting picture section printed by the new Alco Gravure process. "The World is Mine," by Albert W. Atwood, describes the financial future opening before the United States, and gives the opinions of our foremost financiers and business men concerning it. "Believing and Doing," by Emerson Hough, tells the true story of what is perhaps the most remarkable college in the world. For the series entitled "The Glory of the States," George Ade has a characteristic article on Indiana—the state that has won eminence "without acquiring a double chin or wearing a wrist watch." "Getting and Holding a Job," by Hugh S. Fullerton, tells how many progressive business concerns are invoking the aid of science in hiring their employees. James Hay Jr. has an interesting article on ex-Senator Burton of Ohio, the man with a miracle memory.

One of the most striking stories in this issue is "The Conqueror," by Dorothy Canfield. There is also good and varied fiction by Alice Garland Steele, Sophie Kerr, Ellis Parker Butler, who gives us a new "Swatty" story, and Olive Higgins Prouty, who continues her novel, "The Fifth Wheel."

For the series of practical health articles that is one of the magazine's continued and important features, a successful business man tells how he doubled his life and trebled his income by conquering an ailment that numbers its victims by hundreds of thousands.

The need for abler motion picture writers is told by Walter Prichard Eaton. Among the month's "Interesting People" is an account of Hedley Francis Le Bas, who raised the British army by advertising. The department on "Habits," "The Family's Money," etc., conclude an unusually attractive and up-to-date issue.
