LEARN TO SURMOUNT ALL OBSTACLES

THERE is scarcely a day in our lives when we do not meet with a rebuff of some kind somewhere—when we are not suddenly called to take measure of ourselves and our social relations.

Nine times out of ten, if we will impartially study the rebuffs that come to us, we will find that we have been in some degree transgressors ourselves.

We must learn to be philosophical in all that comes to us and learn to turn everything to our advancement.

We must learn that we make better progress when someone is after us. We are more alert and apprehensive then.

A slap on the shoulder is a good thing, but a prod is better yet—just as "a word to the wise is sufficient."

We must learn to hold the whip hand over ourselves at all times—to be keener against ourselves than any one else can possibly be.

If we would win we must hold the balance of power against ourselves in our own hands. We must be a spur to ourselves.

Plato said, "Know thyself."

We must study the supreme ego that dwells within us, studying and fortifying its weakness and strongholds. We must determine to be victor over every rebuff and to never let the soul know defeat.

Defeat comes only when we have not lived up to our highest possibilities.

We must let only a supreme "I will" possess us.

We must learn to be adepts in the art of winning—to turn the "slings of outrageous fortune" to our advantage.

A dainty self-examination of ourselves will lead to this. Above all must it be done when rebuffs come to us. We must learn not to take them resentfully, but rather to use them as a magnifying glass with which to discover our weaknesses and thus forewarn us.

We must hold the whip hand of impartial judgment ever.

Then we are captains of our destiny.—Annie Miller Knapp in the Woman's National Weekly.

A SERIOUS ERROR

Farmers make a very serious mistake in failing to destroy the squirrels, gophers and prairie dog pests at the proper time.

In using treated grain as a destroyer of rodent pests, it should be borne in mind that the creatures are not grain eaters except and only at the time they are awakened from their long winter's sleep. With the first real breath of spring they awaken, and ravenous for food, will quickly take poisoned grain. At this time the poison is treble effective by reason of their famished condition; as soon, however, as the succulent grass roots appear, the effectiveness of the dry food decreases, for the pests divide their attention, and later ignore the grain entirely.

Scattered Shots

THIS SPRING weather makes even political ambition blossom forth.

WHAT WOULD the present administration do if there should suddenly be a shortage of ink?

TO GET THE right men in office, you must vote; to vote you must register.

By PHILESS

The biggest social event of the year was easily the fifth annual ball of Klamath Falls Lodge No. 1247, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, held at the Elks' beautiful new home, Monday evening, and attended by about 100 couples. This was the style event of the season, and beautiful new gowns of every hue were in evidence. Klamath Falls women endearing themselves still more to the sterner sex by their splendid appearance on that big occasion. The Peerless orchestra furnished excellent music for dancing—so good that encores were repeatedly demanded.

Splendid orchestra of seven will render special music for "The Battle Cry of Peace." 1t

Breckenridge Tells Why Militia Plan Will Fail

tucky send to the senate of the United States as its representatives John Jones and James Smith. There is a distinct effort to confuse the public mind and make it believe the militia can be made a national force. This is a preposterous effort willfully to fool the American people.

My condemnation of the militia as a national dependence is a condemnation of the system, and not of the personnel. The rank and file of the militia for the most part is made up of fine, patriotic men who wish to prepare themselves to serve the nation, and are in the militia because it is the only present existing military land force in the United States outside the regular army.

Most of the persistent and pernicious opposition to the creation of a real national force of citizen soldiers for the defense of the nation comes from persons purporting to represent the rank and file of the militia. I doubt whether they do represent the rank and file of the militia.

I notice that most of the opposing individuals are persons having a selfish interest by reason of their employment in life, in seeing to it that the militia is made the only recipient of support rendered by the national government to citizen soldiers. Their opposition is to be interpreted in light of this fact.

Nearly every disaster of the revolutionary war and of the war of 1812 was largely due to dependence upon the militia system. George Washington's main dependence in the Revolution was upon the continental army, a force separate from the militia.

and absolutely under the control of the national government.

If a man is honest minded he must accept the logical consequences of his views. If he thinks the army of the United States should be split up into forty-eight parts, each part entirely governed by one of the separate states, also he must believe that the navy of the United States should be divided into forty-eight parts, each separate part under the control of a separate state.

He must also believe that the foreign affairs of the nation should be managed not by the nation, but by the forty-eight different states, each according to its own interests and own views.

He should logically contend that the postoffice department should not be integrated as to its control under one national department, but should be parcelled out to the management of forty-eight separate and independent states. The same should be the man's conclusion as to the control of commerce and as to all internal improvements now conducted by the nation.

If there is any one sphere of governmental activity where the nation should stand united, acting as an integrated unit, it is in the preparation for and the conduct of the defense of the nation, which may involve the very life of the nation.

The issue is fundamental and uncompromisable, and to fail to look these facts squarely in the face and, in this present emergency write the easily enacted and fundamental reform that will give to the nation the control of its defenses, is to tamper with the country's safety.

served a delightful luncheon. The affair was so enjoyable that it was well toward morning before the final number was played and the happy throng dispersed.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hogue on High street near Sixth was the scene of a delightful Valentine party Saturday night, the guests being Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Barton, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lincoln, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Coeller, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Delzell, Mr. and Mrs. Luther King, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Wattenburg, Miss Augusta Parker, Miss Daisy Cole, Miss Lulu Wattenburg, Miss Laura Bice, Miss Helen Paxson, Miss Georgia Porter, Miss Alice Blackford, Miss Rachel Manneman, Miss Nellie McAndrews, Miss Gertrude Seelyer, Miss Clara Elmer, Miss Ida Momyer, Miss Mary Stewart, Miss Hazel Hardenbrook, Miss Agnes Swoboda, Miss Josephine Van Riper, Miss Lena Stoecher, Miss Edna Wells, Miss Ada Soule, Miss Pearl Talley, Miss Bessie Boyd, A. H. Schadler, Thad McHattan, Hugo H. Loewe, B. L. Ezell, H. E. Getz, Clifford Severts, Earl Hill, Glen B. Garrett, Will Hagelstein, Andrew M. Collier, Arthur Leavitt, Harold C. Merryman, Dr. Fred Westfeld, Dave Lennox, Eugene Lamm, Duncan B. Campbell, Gilbert Arnold, P. L. Fountain, George Stevenson, Wilbur Telford, Chandler Watson, Carl A. Grubb, E. J. Mayer and Robert Riggs. The Hogue home was prettily decorated for the affair, hearts and other symbolic decorations being used with tasteful effect. Several Valentine games, fortunes, music and other amusements were indulged in, and dainty refreshments were served.

Miss Alice A. Blackford, assisted by Mrs. Fred Cofer, pianist, is arranging for misses' and children's classes in folk-dancing and singing games, to be given Saturday afternoon. Regular work begins Saturday, February 26th. Folk dancing affords expression to the love of beauty and rhythm, for which modern life seems to afford little opportunity. The folk dance affords healthful exercise, and since girls like these dances and dance them with enthusiasm, they will derive from them more vigorous exercise than they would through less enjoyable movements. Miss Blackford has had a large relation to this work, not only through her personal enthusiasm, but through her personal contact with leading exponents. She has had instruction under Miss Elizabeth Burckhead, chairman of the committee on folk dancing of the Playground Association of America, who learned the dances at first hand from people of various countries, and also under Miss Blanche M. Trilling of the Chicago schools and Miss Edna B. Manship, instructor in physical education at Wellesley college. These classes will afford the children of Klamath Falls a splendid opportunity to express themselves aesthetically.
