MOLDING MANKIND

TO THE person with a sufficiently detached viewpoint to see conditions of modern life with a clear vision it must seem odd, to say the least, that a people should observe the laws of physical development with respect to their domestic animals and should at the same time disregard those laws with respect to themselves, well knowing that the same laws apply to both animals and man.

No horseman would allow his horse to stand week after week on a cement floor, in a dark stall, with scant ventilation and improper food, and expect it to remain healthy, agile and strong. Yet the same man will confine himself in an office eight or ten hours a day under substantially the conditions that he would condemn as detrimental to the health of his horse. The farmer that will not overwork his horses will overwork himself; though he will not abuse his sow, he will neglect his wife, ignorantly and unintentionally, it may be, but nevertheless he neglects her.

In every rural community may be found men and women who are aged before their time; completely broken in health and mind at an age when they should be in a condition to enjoy well-earned leisure. They know well enough that their farm machinery needed attention and careful operation to insure good work and durability; yet they did not know, or at any rate they ignored the fact that their own bodies were machines that needed even more skillful handling than did the mower, the binder or the engine.

Business men in the smaller towns and cities are hardly less at fault in this respect than are the farmers. Long hours at the counter and desk seem to them a necessity, while they utterly ignore the greater necessities of fresh air, exercise and variety of employment.

Society as a whole suffers from this disregard of fundamental laws of hygiene; the home loses much that is best in life; the influence of father is lost to the family, and the burdens of the wife and mother, due largely to the lack of co-operation and sympathy born of companionship with her husband, deprive the children of the sweetest, most potent and most permanent of influences upon the youthful character.

The community as a whole, when organized, can and in the future must do something to provide the means and then to encourage and teach an appreciation of recreation. The community determines what society in its larger sense shall be, and in providing recreation for its people it is giving to them a garden in which to plant the seeds of all the virtues.

Dutch Government Plans Vast Reclamation Work

United Press Service
THE HAGUE, March 1—(By mail)—Holland's recent disastrous floods on the Zuider Zee coast promise to hasten the Netherlands government's plans for reclaiming most of the Zuider Zee and turning the rest of it into a fresh water lake. The floods were the result of a northwest storm which swept the European coast recently. The waves, driven by the gale through the narrow neck of the Zuider Zee, could not get out in the wind's face, and the water kept piling up, higher and higher, until at last the tremendous pressure burst the dikes in many places and vast tracts of country were inundated. The scheme for eliminating flood possibilities is a good many years ago. It seems likely now to be put into effect soon. The proposition of the Dutch engineers, the world's foremost experts at reclamation work, is to build an embankment across the mouth of the Zuider Zee, from Ewjalus, North Holland, to the southwest corner of the island of Wieringen, and from the northeast corner of Wieringen to Piaam, Friesland, and to pump out all the salt water inside this embankment. At the center of the enclosed area, as for as the embankment, the purpose is to leave a basin into which the river IJsel and lesser streams will empty, gradually filling it with fresh water. The rest, except for a channel extending southwest to the vicinity of Amsterdam, will be reclaimed. Reclamation is to be accomplished by the construction of dikes on the fresh water lake shore before it has time to fill up from the streams emptying into it. The new areas are described by the engineers as the northwest, northeast, southwest and southeast "polders," or reclaimed lands. The "polders" shore lines will extend, respectively, from the northeast end of Eleringen to the town of Medemblik, from the town of Oude Mirden to the mouth of the IJsel, from the town of Euhulzen to Marken and also from the mouth of the IJsel to Muder. These lines will not be drawn as the crow flies, but will bulge to the seaward, considerably increasing the land and reducing the lake area. Execution of the plan will mean the addition of 815 square miles of Holland's land territory and of a like

6.7 square miles in extent. Experts are of the opinion that the reclaimed land will be fit for cultivation within sixteen years of the start on diking operations and that it will support a population of 250,000 souls. The lake also will have its value, fresh water being needed in Holland. Incidentally the embankment from Ewjalus to Piaam will carry a double line of railroad and a highway for ordinary traffic, reducing the land trip from north Holland to the Friesland coast from about 300 to 25 miles. The embankment will be provided with locks and sluices for the regulation of the lake level and the passage of ships. It is estimated that the work will take, altogether, thirty-three years and that its cost will be about $100,000,000.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it, and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—Adv.

Prominent authorities have recently declared that an oil correctly refined from asphalt-base crude can be made not only equal but superior to paraffine-base oils.
