LONDON, May 15.—Lord Clanricarde is dead. Lord Clanricarde! The man the British people called "the meanest man in England."

What the London papers did to his memory, even before he was buried, was sufficient.

"The Meanest Man in England!" For half a century he held that distinction. In glaring columns, amidst the war news, the London papers told the story of Lord Clanricarde's life. It is a story particularly for Irish folks in America.

It was men like Clanricarde who drove the Irish to America. He was the meanest Irish landlord.

Clanricarde's grandfather was Canning, British prime minister in 1827. His uncle was the first viceroy to India. When he was young Clanricarde got the idea that God made a few very rich, fine and cultured people to be human beings, and that everybody who wasn't rich, fine and cultured wasn't human. Human rights, as he knew them, were the rights of the rich.

Canadian soldiers in Hyde Park, not knowing their London, have looked with wonder and pity on a little weazened up old man, in ragged, fifty-year-old clothes, who used to sit on the public seats—the private seats cost 2 cents—a hard, cold look in his eyes.

This was Lord Clanricarde, owner of twenty square miles of land in Ireland, with Irish peasants paying him $150,000 a year. This was Lord Clanricarde, once the swiftest fop in London, victim of the idea that God made him to be a specially fine human being, with special rights.

In 1874 he fell heir to the castle at Portunna, one of the finest houses in Ireland, and the estate of 60,000 acres. He thought he had fallen heir to the lives and souls of his tenants, too. He paid one visit to the estate in 1874. He never returned. His tenants had demanded certain improvements—and rights. He sent agents. More than one of them was killed. There isn't an acre of the land that hasn't its tragedy. Homes were broken up by poverty because of Lord Clanricarde's high rents.

He demanded a large share of everything the tenants grew; he would not spend money for improving their pitiful homes.

Blood was shed time and again, while he was in London pottering around with antiques.

Irish landlords changed, and became human; Lord Clanricarde never.

The government refused him police aid in evicting tenants; he hired agents to do the evicting.

Decent people began to leave him alone. Of all the money he took in from his tenants he never known to have spent a cent for improvements. He stood pat on the idea that human rights were the rights of the rich. The splendid castle fell into ruins. Other Irish landlords began to sell their land to the government, to be distributed among the Irish peasants. Clanricarde would not sell.

A special bill was introduced into the house of lords, expropriating his estates. Though he was a lord, and was entitled to sit in the house of lords and help in the government of his country, Lord Clanricarde never appeared until the chances of losing his land arose. One day a shabby, bent, hard-faced little old man appeared at the door of the house of lords, but when he attempted to enter the policeman stopped him. It was Lord Clanricarde. He protested in a pitiful voice. He talked of property rights. Property had its duties as well as its rights, said someone. Then he walked out of the place. He became a solitary miser. He spent money for antiques only. His cheap rooms were filled with rare articles, littered about, carelessly. No fire burned in his grate. Antiquity dealers and lawyers he hired to try to prevent the government from taking his land were the only human beings he knew.

Last year the government won. Today Lord Clanricarde's estate is being divided for sale to small holders. Lord Clanricarde was paid a million and a half dollars by the government, and the day after his death, while he rested in his rich mahogany casket, he got a million and a half dollars' worth of the bitterest advertisement that ever given a human being.

upon purchase of the same, the said sheriff shall place the purchaser in complete possession of the property he shall have purchased.

That the court shall declare and decree that plaintiff's lien upon all of the said property, by virtue of said mortgage aforesaid, is prior in time and superior in right to that of any person or persons claiming under the said defendants, Sam C. Trayner and Mary I. Trayner, thereto or thereupon or upon any part thereof.

And that the said defendants, the Klamath Water Users Association, United States of America, J. G. Camp and C. M. Pettit, and all persons claiming or to claim, by, through, or under them, or any of them, shall be forever barred and foreclosed of all their right, title, estate, equity, interest and lien, at law and in equity, and of equity of redemption, in, to, and upon the said real property, and every part thereof, and that the plaintiff may have such other and further and general relief as to equity may seem meet.

This summons is published pursuant to an order of the Honorable D. V. Kuykendall, judge of the circuit court of the state of Oregon, for Klamath county, Oregon, dated April 4, A. D. 1916, and the first publication of this summons is made in the Evening Herald, a newspaper, on the 7th day of April, A. D. 1916.

INDUSTRIAL WORK TO BE REWARDED

BOYS AND GIRLS SUCCEEDING AT STATE FAIR TO GET THE FREE SCHOLARSHIPS—MUCH INTEREST IS SHOWN.

SALEM, May 15.—State Superintendent of Public Instruction Churchhill announced today that he had completed arrangements for sending the boys and girls, who will win the capital prizes in the industrial club work at the state fair to the Oregon Agricultural College for the boys' and girls' summer school.

Twenty-one children were successful in winning these prizes at the last state fair. The prizes consist of a membership in the short course at the Agricultural College, with all expenses paid.

"The boys' and girls' club work, which is carried on co-operatively by the state department of education, the extension service of the Oregon Agricultural College and the United States bureau of agriculture, is increasing in interest to such an extent that clubs are being formed in every section of Oregon," said Superintendent Churchhill today.

"Since the first of the year I have had two field workers, N. C. Maris and L. P. Harrington, continuously engaged in forming clubs in the state. The work of the Agriculture College in sending to the members of these clubs bulletins on how to select seed and care for the growing crops, and also bulletins on canning and sewing, has made a wonderful advancement in the standard of the work done by the school children. The example of Claus Charley, of Jackson county, shows what a wholesome influence one boy may have in this work. At the state fair in 1914 he won the state prize on his corn. The next year through the efforts of the county school superintendent and one of the Medford banks, fifty boys of Jackson county were supplied with seed corn selected from Claus Charley's prize winning corn."
