JAPAN A LIVELY COMPETITOR

KEEP your eye on Japan. Not only is Japan subsidizing her industries and her merchant marine, but a democratic administration is giving her a larger opportunity in our market. During the eight months of the fiscal year 1916, ended February last, Japan sent into our market $58,500,000 worth of goods. Nearly $20,000,000 more than for the same period ended February, 1915, which was also under the democratic tariff law. The records show a steady monthly increase in Japanese goods coming into our market, beginning with $9,000,000 in July, 1915, and rising to $13,000,000 in February last.

But our exports to Japan do not record a normal increase, in spite of the fact that the European source of supply is considerably hampered, and the United States is the logical source from which to make up the deficiency. Exports for the eight months ended February, 1916, totaled $40,500,000, practically what they were during the eight months ended February, 1915, under the republican law. During the 1915 period ending February, there was a terrific slump in our export trade with Japan, the total being $17,000,000, and the five months of the climb being under the democratic tariff law.

Another matter worthy of serious consideration is that Japan is delivering her merchandise in her own bottoms. The figures for February are not available, but those for the seven months ended January, 1916, show that Japanese vessels delivered to us $63,000,000 worth. The seamen's law was operative for but three months of that period. That law put American vessels on the Pacific Coast out of business, and Japan controls the Pacific Ocean today. During the seven months period ending January, 1916, Japan brought to us in her own vessels merchandise to the value of $75,000,000, so it would appear that Japan is using her trans-oceanic delivery wagons to carry every dollar's worth of her goods to our ports, and something over, thanks to the seaman's law.

If there ever was a combination calculated to put the United States off the commercial map it is the Underwood tariff law and the seamen's law. The bill of particulars against the democratic party requires nothing more than the citation of those two laws.

JUST SUPPOSING—

THE Railroad Commission used all its influence to secure more railroads and utilities;

And the labor commissioner brought his influence to bear to get jobs for laborers;

And the market commissioner worked for more consumers and fought outrageous profits or middlemen;

And the industrial insurance commission made it possible to get more employers for workmen;

And the social welfare commission put more women and girls into jobs than they throw out;

And the sealer of weights and measures removed obstacles to commerce instead of erecting new ones.

Wouldn't the taxpayers feel as if they were getting more for their money?

Scattered Shots

BUT IN SPITE of the calamity some people predicted if this or that man did not get a nomination, the fish bit, and the ball team played just as fine as ever yesterday.

LET'S START a new campaign now, a campaign to put the city cemetery in presentable condition for Memorial Day.

WE COULD also do something worth while if we would establish a playground for the children. School will be dismissed in a few days, and then the street, with the danger of accidents, will be the playground for many, while some of the boys will learn the art of smoking, cussing, and other undesirable habits at the swimming hole.

BUT, BY THE WAY, you want to notice Klamath Falls' new flusher next time you are on Main street. It dusts off the dust without raising a dust.

CRISIS CAUSED BY WILSON'S VACILLATION

United Republican Party Needed to Restore Self-Respect and Honor to U. S.

Portland, Ore.—A review of the inconsistencies of the present Democratic Administration, particularly in its dealings with the belligerent powers of Europe and with Mexico, was presented by Theodore E. Burton, Ohio's candidate for the Republican nomination for the Presidency. Mr. Burton, who is ex-United States Senator from Ohio, spoke under the auspices of the Oregon Republican Club. His address was essentially political in its nature, but in view of the present difficulties confronting the Nation it was touched throughout with a highly patriotic tone.

The audience manifested its unequivocal approval by a tremendous ovation when he said: "At times like this we are not Republicans nor Democrats, Socialists or Prohibitionists, we are American citizens."

But Senator Burton was emphatic in his declaration that the very presence of these international complications calls for firmness and experience in handling the affairs of the Nation.

Under such conditions and under such circumstances, he asserted, the thoughts of the people instinctively turn to the Republican party—the party of experience, the party of capability, the party of accomplishment.

"The one fact more obvious than any other in all the conflicting current of events," he said, "is that the present ignominious status of the United States in relation to other countries has been brought about by the halting, the vacillation and the hesitancy of the present Administration."

He then took up in detail a discussion of the present Administration's conduct of international affairs, saying: "Now the President makes the most extravagant speeches for preparedness; he says we must have the largest Navy in the world; he says that no man can tell what a day or an hour may bring forth. It was surely just as obvious when the first gun was fired in Europe that the United States must be ready to protect itself as it is today. There is such a thing as being too late to prepare, but when danger threatens there is no such thing as being too early. Yet the Administration, with equal extravagance of assertion, with equal impatience of all who disagree and with equal inability therefore to convince anyone of its entire sincerity."

"And what is it all about? Here again the whole difficulty arose from the exercise of those two conspicuous talents of the present Administration, the passion for interference in the affairs of other nations and the inability to keep away from both sides of the same question."

"On February 10, 1915, the Administration warned the German government of the consequences of carrying out the policy foreshadowed in its admiralty proclamation in case it should result in destroying any merchant vessel of the United States or in causing the death of American citizens, and threatened to hold the German government to a strict accountability for any such act."

"A note from the Secretary of State on May 15, last, limited the rule that lives of noncombatants of neutral or other states should not be put in jeopardy to such as sailed on unarmed merchantmen."

"The word 'unarmed' is important. But, departing from these earlier declarations, in the latter part of January, 1916, the State Department, in a note to the various powers sought to induce the allies to disarm their merchantmen and placed especial stress on the disadvantages of submarines in co-operation with armed merchantmen, saying in substance it would not be fair that the submarines should be compelled to expose themselves to destruction from such vessels and that merchantmen should not be permitted to carry armament at all, stating further that the United States Government was seriously considering the announcement of its purpose to treat a merchant vessel carrying guns as an auxiliary cruiser because of the changed conditions in maritime warfare resulting from the introduction of the submarine and its defenseless character."

"After the publication of this note Germany and Austria-Hungary on or about February 10 very promptly announced that on and after March 1 they would regard all merchantmen carrying armament as warships and would exercise the right to destroy them without warning."

"What did the President do then? He said: 'No, for such a course would involve the loss of American citizens, and American citizens have the right to travel on merchantmen armed for defense.'"

"Thus we attempted to persuade England and France to give up a right which they claimed under international law, but would not ask American citizens to yield a right which we alleged belonged to them under the same law."

"In other words, we took the position that England and France had no right to arm their merchantmen, for thus they became warships, while, on the other hand, only a few weeks later we maintained that although they were warships, Germany had no right to sink them without warning."

"So it appears that the whole controversy, of which the end is not yet, fraught as it is with so much danger to the peace of the United States, discussed from one end of the country to the other, causing the most acrimonious debates for many years in Congress and leading to a split in the party charged with the responsibility of government, was brought about by shifting our position and taking a stand directly contrary to the one first assumed."

Getting There

Seehorn GETZ Wood Phone 72 622 Main Street

Dr. Morgan has returned from a short visit to his former home. Mr. McLeilan was a Klamath Falls visitor Tuesday. J. A. McComb was in the Falls Tuesday on business. Mr. and Mrs. Cheyne visited their son, Robt. Cheyne and family, last week. The Mt. Laki Parent-Teachers Association held a meeting Friday afternoon at the school house. The new organ has come and was inspected. It is a fine one, and the children enjoy it thoroughly. There are several musicians among the pupils. The picnic for closing day was discussed. It was also decided that the Parent-Teachers Association go on record as greatly appreciating the excellent and satisfactory work of Miss Selma McRaynolds as teacher of the Mt. Laki school this past year, and that they regret very much the decision made by the board of directors in direct opposition to the almost unanimous wish and desire of the parents and patrons of the school, expressed in the petition so signed and presented. This week is examination week. School closes on Friday. To the Taxpayers of Klamath County I wish to take this means of thanking the people of Klamath county for their support and hearty co-operation of the past twelve years. I have no regret to express at the decision of the democratic party at the recent primaries, and I shall continue to work for the benefit of Klamath county in civil life, as I have always tried to do in an official capacity. IMPROVED FIELDING AND BATTING TEAMWORK BY LOCALS RESULTS IN SECOND CONSECUTIVE SHUT-OUT FOR SEASON

Klamath Falls played errorless ball behind Bigbee yesterday, and for the second Sunday in succession the visiting team had to go home without a run to their credit. The score was 6 to 0.

Rigbee allowed Dunsuir four hits yesterday, the first being an easy out on a still day, but the heavy wind blew the ball back out of Palmer's reach, allowing Jolly to live. Lyle put too much on the next one, and Jolly went to second, where he died.

In the fourth, with two out and two strikes up, Morgan laid down a neat bunt which Bigbee felded to Alton, but umps called Morgan safe. Morgan was caught stealing and put out, Clarke to Mober.

Jolly made a real hit in the seventh
