Says Bandit Fighting Is an Everlasting Skirmish

By H. D. JACOBS
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

ADVANCED BASE, SAN ANTONIO, Chihuahua, May 16.—(by courier to Columbus, N. M.)—Chasing Villista bandits is like fighting a stubborn fire. Squelch them in one place and they break out in another.

The American troops have clashed with the main body of Villistas in four "major" engagements. In each case the enemy lost heavily and his force has been scattered and broken. Three times the bandits have reorganized and recruited almost to their original strength. And there is every possibility that they will be able to do so again.

Colonel Dodd and his column of the Seventh cavalry struck the Villistas at Guerrero on March 28, defeating them in a running fight and sending them scurrying into the hills in small groups. Four days later Colonel Brown of the Tenth surprised a small force composed of these scattered remnants at Aguas Calientes. Again the bandits were broken up. Then came the only real stand the Villistas have made, the battle with Dodd at Tomachic, April 22. Although badly whipped, at least a hundred of the Villistas who participated in the engagement were able to get together and give Major Howze's Eleventh cavalry a battle at Ojo Azules. Nearly half of the Mexican force was left dead on the field. Many badly wounded are reported to have gotten away. Despite this overwhelming defeat, it is still an open question whether this band will be able to reform again.

The American expedition has been in Mexico nearly two months. Pancho Villa, whose capture or death was the main object, has been driven into retirement. Reported from various sources to be badly wounded, he may be either dead or disabled. At least he has been eliminated as a political and military factor in Mexico for the time being. About 150 of his men, including those lost at Columbus, have been killed. Several of his chiefs are among the dead.

Yet banditry is still prevalent in those parts of Chihuahua not actually policed by American troops. Reports are being received almost daily of various sized bands operating in districts removed from the American lines. Some of these are identified as Villistas. The identity of the others is doubtful. Individuals of known Villista sympathies are constantly being brought into camp by patrols. Even now several detachments are in pursuit of Candelario Cervantes, reported at large with a considerable force.

Where is it going to end? Kill a Villista and two boo up in his place. Decimate an entire band and they are recruited to full strength a few days later. It really will be quite a job to eliminate every "malo hombre" in Northern Mexico, but it appears as though the expedition will have to go just that if it is going to make the country habitable. Given time, the Americans promise to do it.

The Filipino Y. M. C. A., of which Teodoro R. Yanco, now in the United States, is president, conducts special classes for the preparation of aspirants for the Philippine civil service.

There is less waste and duplication of functions in the Philippine civil service than in many a national civil service, not excepting that of the United States.

AUTO JAUNT TO THE ROSE SHOW

KLAMATH COUNTY BOOSTERS
PLANNING JUNKET TO PORTLAND, ADVERTISING THIS SECTION OVER THE STATE

A number of Klamath's automobile enthusiasts and boosters are planning an excursion to the Rose Festival at Portland June 7, 8 and 9. The prospect of a beautiful trip from this city up the west side of the Cascades over the Pacific highway and back via the Columbia highway and the east side of the mountains is proving very alluring. Already a number have expressed their intention of joining the expedition.

Those who have no machines and wish to go in this way can probably make arrangements with car owners who would not otherwise have full loads. It is planned to take an experienced repair man so that any car trouble enroute can be attended to without delay. The autos will be decorated with Klamath pennants in a way that will make the procession's source unmistakable. Plans for advertising our section in several other ways on the trip are also being made. Several machines are now lined up.

It is requested that car owners wishing to make the trip, and others wishing to go, will leave their names at the Commercial Club.
