

KLAMATH SCENES IN "GEOGRAPHIC"

PICTURES SECURED DURING VISIT OF GILBERT GROSVENOR HERE LAST SUMMER, ARE USED IN THE MAGAZINE

In a comprehensive article, "The Land of the Best," a story of America's scenic wonders, by Gilbert Grosvenor, featured in the current issue of the National Geographic Magazine, two of Klamath county's scenic spots are used in illustration. One of these is a colored picture of Crater Lake, the other is C. E. Miller's splendid view of Mt. Pitt across Upper Klamath Lake.

Grosvenor visited the Klamath country last summer, and was much impressed with our scenery, and especially Upper Klamath Lake. Ever since then, Klamath views have been appearing in the National Geographic.

Regarding Crater Lake, the article says: "The eye beholds twenty miles of unbroken cliffs, ranging from 500 to nearly 3,000 feet in height, encircling a deep sheet of placid water in which the mirrored walls vie with the originals in brilliancy and greatly enhance the depth of the prospect. Although the blue of the lake is deeper than anyone who has not beheld it can imagine, it is yet so transparent that even on a hazy day a white dinner plate ten inches in diameter may be seen at a depth of nearly 100 feet."

profusion and beauty of its water birds. Great snowy pelicans float about on its waters like graceful swans. There are countless great blue herons, coots, shins, gallinules, kingfishers and different varieties of ducks, all protected by the game laws of the state of Oregon, whose citizens long ago realized the large asset they had in their wild life, and have protected it. Upper Klamath Lake is reached via Klamath Falls."

SERENADERS GIVE A PLEASING BILL

HAWAIIANS APPEARING AT HOUSTON'S OPERA HOUSE PRESENT ONE OF THE MOST PLEASING PROGRAMS GIVEN HERE

One of the best musical programs rendered in Klamath Falls in some time was given at Houston's opera house last night, when the Royal Hawaiian Serenaders appeared. In fact, the bill was so good that Manager Houston of the opera house made arrangements to have the troupe play again this evening.

Despite the big dancing party at the Elks' Temple and other counter attractions, the opera house was well filled last night. A still bigger crowd is expected this evening.

The members of the company, seven in number, and all pleasing musicians, and in their solo and ensemble song numbers, they won hearty applause. The solos of David Nakas, tenor, were especially good, and steel method guitar selections and ukulele solos by Nakas Kalama and Dick Reuter won the audience.

A new feature was Hawaiian dancing. Princess Anna Kaula gave the famous Hawaiian "hula dance," and Harry Kane introduced some eccentric Hawaiian dances in connection with his songs.

Altogether, it was a pleasing bill in itself, and in addition the feature film program of the Star theater is being shown at the opera house while the Star is undergoing painting and alteration.

The picture feature tonight is Moroco's five part production, "The Yankee Girl," a breezy and spectacular filmization, starring Blanch Ring, America's favorite farce star.
