THE REAL VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Chicago Republican—The Kansas newspaper advice to "back up the free trade president" seems appropriate since the president himself makes his chief business either backing up or backing down.

Dawson Co. (Mont.) Review—Mr. Wilson has had many views on preparedness, and it is not strange that congress found it difficult to follow his many changes of mind.

Caldwell (Idaho) Tribune—The Wilson administration for the second time is withdrawing from Mexico same accomplishment. The Mexican problem will be with us forever, at the rate we are going.

Uniontown (Pa.) Herald—Over and over again Mr. Wilson has been warned where his "watchful waiting" policy was leading.

Salem (Ore.) Statesman—Now Mexicans want the United States soldiers to get out of Mexico, on the ground that their object has been accomplished. This, too, may take some "watchful waiting."

Mt. Vernon (Ohio) Republican—News—As might be expected, democrats in congress have been very much embarrassed by disclosures regarding the "slush fund" raised by Italian lemon importers for the purpose of influencing tariff legislation in this country in 1912.

Ashland (Wis.) Press—President Wilson planted a tree recently. We hope it stays planted, and a hundred years from now it can be pointed out as the tree planted by America's greatest note writer.

Burlington (Ia.) Hawkeye—Democratic National Chairman McCombs believes in quitting while the quitting is good.

Trenton (Mo.) Republican—American industries have always needed protection, and will need it more than ever when the present European war ends, and the products of cheap labor will be hunting a market in this country.

Minot (N. D.) Optic-Reporter—President Wilson is evidently determined to fight it out on this line if it takes all the stationery in the White House.

Senator Harding—"Watchful waiting" brought us contempt in Mexico, lessened respect for us in Europe, and lowered the standard of confidence at home.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

"Pharaoh's Daughter"

J. W. JENKINS, Pastor of First Christian Church.

Text—Exodus, 2:1-10.

We have albums in our homes containing photos of our loved ones and our friends. We love to turn its pages and read the lessons written in the faces. Even the dress and styles are interesting, and sometimes amusing. We also have another book on the center table filled with pen pictures. It is Mother's Bible. We love to study these pictures of the long ago because they are so full of interest. Human nature is ever the same, and a single life truly portrayed as by an inspired pen is always interesting, because it touches our lives at so many points. This beautiful, sweet story, or rather pen picture of Pharaoh's daughter is before us, and let us study it.

First, let us eliminate our subject from all others of the same name. There are three persons known in the Bible as Pharaoh's daughter. In First Chronicles, 4th chapter and 18th verse, we learn that Merod took as his wife Pharaoh's daughter. This woman lived about one thousand four hundred years before Christ. She is known to posterity only because of the company she kept. In a genealogical record she is called Ethliah, Pharaoh's daughter, whom Merod took. No one knows which Pharaoh's daughter she was.

We read in First Kings, 3d chapter, "And Solomon made affinity with Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and took Pharaoh's daughter and brought her into the city of David." Some say she was treated with distinction for a time, but later the king's conscience troubled him because she was an idolator, and he removed her to a house he built for her. She, too, derived her renown from her associations. She was the wife of Israel's greatest king. The pen picture does not portray the talents and virtues of this woman, if she possessed any.

Pharaoh's daughter, the preserver of Moses, lived nearly three thousand five hundred years ago. For a simple act of womanly benevolence her name has been immortalized. Twice her name is mentioned in the New Testament. Once by the great apostle to the Gentiles, and once by Stephen, the first martyr for the Christian faith. The pen picture of this young woman, as drawn in the book of Exodus, is beautiful beyond description. A goodly child is born to a Hebrew family. The cruel decree to slay the male children of the Hebrews had gone forth, but a mother's love defied the king's decree. The child was concealed in the rushes in the waters of the sacred Nile. Pharaoh's daughter came to bathe in the river. The cry of the helpless infant awakened compassion, and Israel's future law-giver was saved alive. The Bible leaves us in ignorance as to what Pharaoh's daughter she was. Josephus tells us her name was Thermuthis, and history says she was the daughter of the mild king Seti I, and sister of Rameses II.

The world is under lasting obligations to this young woman, who saved in her own palace and "educated in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," Moses, the man of God. Who was her father? History says Seti I, the cruel Pharaoh who said, "Behold, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we; come, let us deal wisely with them, lest they multiply, and it come to pass that, when there falleth out any war, they also join themselves to our enemies, and fight against us, and get them up out of the land." And who commanded the midwives saying, "If the child be a son, then ye shall kill it, but if it be a daughter, then she shall live." The empty tomb of this heartless tyrant who issued this decree is at Thebes on the Upper Nile. His stone sarcophagus, covered with hieroglyphics, now lies in the Laone Museum in England.

Greek Town Takes Law in Own Hands

ATHENS, June 17.—"This is the chief of police at d'Arta," explained a man at the other end of the wire when the telephone bell rang in the department of the interior offices today.

D'Arta is a village of 600 not far from Athens. "We held a mass meeting in our town this afternoon, and decided that we will not allow the exportation of grain from our village. Five hundred of us voted to that effect."

Inquiry developed that when the British grain blockade began against Greece, the village banker in d'Arta laid in a large supply of grain and flour, and today d'Arta is one of the very few villages in Greece that has all the flour it wants. The village folk determined to follow the plan of the great nations in similar situations, but the small grain supply of Greece is so unevenly distributed that the chances are that d'Arta may be forced by the department of the interior to part with some of its hoard, in spite of the village resolution.
