WILSON AND DEFENSE

THE disparity between the attitude and expressions of President Wilson on national defense as gleaned from his public utterances of the past year, shows a most remarkable inconsistency, uncertainty, and lack of definite purpose. Speaking on national defense, on December 2, 1914, he said: "But I turn away from the subject; it is not new, there is no new thing to discuss about it." Fourteen months later he said: "I say to you in all solemnity that there is not a day to be lost; not because of any new or critical matter, but I cannot tell what will happen within twenty-four hours." After the raid at Columbus, N. M., when the country was crying aloud for action, and General Funston calling in vain for an adequate disposition of troops on the border, the president confessed: "I haven't even enough men to keep bandits from raiding into United States territory." A year before this he declared: "Let there be no misconception, the country has been misinformed; we have not been negligent of national defense." Speaking of the navy in 1914, President Wilson said: "We shall take leave to be strong on the seas in the future, as in the past." This was no definite appeal for naval

Alfalfa Shows Advantage as a Winter Cattle Food

Feeding facts of interest to Central and Eastern Oregon cattle men were explained by Professor E. L. Potter in an address given before the annual meeting of the Pomona Grange at the Union branch experiment station last Saturday. The purpose of the feeding test was to ascertain the various amounts of grain in connection with alfalfa, most profitable for fattening steers. The test could not be started in 1913-14, since the station had only enough alfalfa hay for one carload of steers. The station did have some bald barley hay and some wild hay, and it was decided to use these in part of the feeding experiments, since there was some question among stock men as to the value of these feeds. "We purchased three carloads of cattle," said Professor Potter, "and put one of them on alfalfa hay alone, one on bald barley hay, and one on wild hay. They were kept on these feeds for 105 days. The alfalfa hay was only of fair quality, and the results were not so good as had been hoped for. The average daily gain for those on the alfalfa hay alone was about a pound a day. The lots on bald barley and wild hay didn't give anything like satisfactory gains. Those on bald barley gained .27 of a pound per day, and those on wild hay .44 of a pound per day. We have not repeated this experiment, because we felt that this one test was enough to show the impracticability of fattening cattle on bald barley and wild hay. "At the end of the test period the increase; it meant leaving the navy as it was, if it meant anything. But during the heat of the preparedness war sweeping the country, when Mr. Wilson felt that political expediency demanded a strong stand on the issue from him, he told the country at Columbus, Ohio: "I think our navy should be the greatest in the world; it should be unconquerable." In spite of these facts, the democratic publicity organization are pleading for President Wilson as the man who "led" the democracy out of the wilderness, as the man who gave the country an alleged matured and definite policy.

MAKE PAPER PULP OF WOOD WASTE

FOREST SERVICE OBSERVATIONS SHOW A BIG INCREASE IN THE UTILIZATION OF BY-PRODUCTS THIS WAY

Portland Special Service
PORTLAND, June 30.—The use of a steadily increasing amount of wood waste in the manufacture of pulp is indicated by figures compiled by the forest service. Although the pulp industry showed a decline in the last year for which complete figures are available (1914) on account of the increasing cost of raw material and general business conditions, more wood waste was used than in any previous year.

Approximately 230,000 cords of waste with a value of $1,400,000 were utilized by 35 of the 200 pulp and paper mills of the United States. It is thought that as the price of cord wood goes up the amount of wood waste used will become greater.

The Canadian pulp industry has had, it is stated, a vigorous growth during the last few years, and the greater portion of its product is marketed in the United States. An average cost of about $4.50 per cord, as compared with the $10 to $16 per cord, which many manufacturers in this country are paying for pulp wood, is the reason given for the growth.

It is pointed out that the development of the supplies of spruce in the national forests of the West and in Alaska, together with the abundance of cheap water power, will eventually attract the paper industry to locate in those regions. Suitable pulp timber can be delivered to desirable mill sites for the next twenty to forty years at prices of about $2.50 to $4 per cord, say experts of the forest service. It is thought that the low price of material and power will more than offset the higher freight rates on the product to the eastern markets.
