The German Merchant Submarine

The Germans have announced a "merchant submarine" is on the way to the United States, and this is the photograph of her upper works sent from Berlin. It is their intention, they declare, to inaugurate a regular submarine merchant service between Germany and the United States. The submarines would carry cargoes of valuable merchandise, which would not require great room. Among the articles this vessel is supposed to carry is a quantity of hemastropine, worth $2,575 a pound, and atropine, worth $1,440 a pound, the Germans declare.

Submarine Merchantman Arrives at Baltimore, Md.

United Press Service BALTIMORE, July 10.—The Deutschland, the first German submarine merchantman to be seen in America, reached Baltimore yesterday. She is 300 feet long and 30 feet wide.

The Deutschland carried mails and dyestuffs. She left Germany, June 23, and went 800 miles out of her course evading cruisers. She sailed over 4,000 miles in reaching the United States, and averaged nearly fourteen knots per hour. Captain Koenig said that his vessel lay on the bottom of the English channel all night on account of rough weather. The crew played the photographs while waiting for a smoother sea. The members drank champagne and ate the best food.

Openly the "Deutschland" sailed 3,800 miles. Only 90 miles were negotiated under water. Captain Koenig declares that his feat shows that the British blockade of Germany is ineffective. He does not doubt his ability to evade British ships on the return voyage.

According to Captain Koenig, the Duesche Ozean Rhederie company of Bremen has built several sister ships to the Deutschland. Crop conditions in Germany this year are excellent, declared the captain. On the return trip this new underwater merchantman will carry nickel and rubber. She is manned by a crew of 27, captained by Paul Koenig.

United Press Service WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10.—The treasury department today informed customs officials that the German merchantman Deutschland is not a war ship or armed vessel. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo immediately told the state department regarding the submarine's status.

United Press Service BALTIMORE, July 10.—As soon as the Deutschland docked her crew immediately began unloading her cargo. Barbed wire barriers were used to keep the crowd back and the work was closely guarded. Captain Paul Koenig declared today that other submarine merchantmen are to arrive in the United States soon. The next one due is the Bremen.
