Anglers licenses are far in the lead in number because of the good fishing for the past several months and because the hunting season for deer and other game has not opened.

Since January 1st, 729 anglers have bought licenses to try their luck in Klamath waters. Besides these 193 persons have bought combination licenses, which entitle them to both fish and hunt. Only 176 hunting licenses have been issued since January 1st.

Four veterans of the Civil War have taken advantage of the law which entitles them to combination licenses without cost. These gray-haired hunters and anglers are Henry Newham, O. A. Stearns, G. F. Voss and G. M. Shippy.

TELEPHONE CO. SECURES RIGHT TO RUIN STREET

RIGHTS OF PROPERTY OWNERS IGNORED BY COUNCIL

By Misrepresentation and Fraud Local Company Obtains Permission to Erect Line of Poles on Conger Avenue—Narrowest Driveway in City Only Place Where Double Line of Poles is Permitted.

The property owners of Conger avenue are considerably aroused over the action of the city council last evening in granting permission to the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company to erect a pole line on the west side of Conger avenue.

Representatives of the company appeared before the council last night and presented a paper signed by five persons waiving objections to the erection of the poles. Showing the questionable methods adopted by the telephone company to secure favorable action by the council, it later developed that one of the names on the petition was secured by misrepresentation, while the other four were those of property owners not in any way interested or affected by the proposed location of the pole line.

Some time ago employees of the telephone company, without consulting the property owners or first securing permission from the city, began work digging holes and locating a new pole line on the west side of Conger avenue. When this work was stopped on complaint of one of the property owners, the man representing the company became very indignant, and questioned the right of anyone, property owner or city official, to interfere with the location of the poles, wherever the company wish to place them.

However, protests were made to the council, and a hearing was had. At that time a committee was appointed to make an investigation, consisting of the mayor, city engineer, and members of the lighting committee. Following the report of the committee, the council refused permission to the company unless they first secured permission to erect the poles from the property owners affected.

No double line of poles have been erected on any street in Klamath Falls for years. The council has in the past tightly confined pole lines, both for light, power and telephone, to one side of the street. Only one side of the street is permitted to be used on Main street, Klamath avenue, and practically all the other streets in the city. While these streets are sixty feet or more in width, Conger avenue is only one-half that wide, and the property owners claim that they are entitled to at least the same consideration as is used in placing poles on other streets of the city.

It is pointed out that Conger avenue is one of the attractive promenades and driveways of the city. Hardly a stranger comes to town for a few days who does not make a trip up the river. As the street is unavoidably narrow, the placing of an extra pole line outside of the four foot sidewalk would make it practically impassable for vehicles. In addition the property owners are planning on having the street paved, and in order to make it convenient as possible for both foot and vehicle passengers, expect to have the pavement extend over the sidewalk. In order to do this it is not desired to have any poles or other obstructions on the west side of the street.

However, the telephone company has seem fit to entirely ignore any rights of the property owners, and have not stopped at any methods, however unethical, to accomplish their purpose, which seems to be that of ruining the street. The action last night was secured without any notice to the property owners, and at a time when their representative on the council was unavoidably absent from the city.
