or three sound teeth.

This is the observation of Sergeant
S. Henderson, recruiting officer for the United States army, who has been here for several days. Sergeant Henderson left at noon today for Chico with but one recruit.

Although eleven local young men appeared before Sergeant Henderson and offered their services in the army, only one could pass the physical examination. Most of the other ten had defective teeth; those whose teeth were sound had poor evesight.

Sergeant Henderson expects to return some time in the fall to try and get more recruits. He believes that at that time there will be idle men about town who will enlist, but who in the logging camps and on ranches.
